A MODERN SAMPSON.

THE PRODIGIOUS FEATS OF A ST. JOHN RIVER NEW BRUNSWICKER.

Thomas or Tom Gardner, as he was familiarly called, was born on the river St. John, one mile above the mouth of the Mactaquack stream, in the year 1798.

Viswed casually, Gardener gave no evidence of unusual power, but when stripped his muscular development was tremendous and it is affirmed that instead of the ordinary ribs be possessed a solid bony wall on either side, and that there was no separation whatever. He stood five teet ten and a half inches, erect and full chested, and never exceeded 190 pounds in weight.

The late Charles Long informed us that at one time he saw Gardener lift from a towboat a puncheon of corn, containing at least twelve bushels, and, swinging around, deposit it on the sand. In so doing he tore the sole off his boot. On another occasion a number of men were crowd only one man could raise it about two inches from the skids. Gardner told four men to alt upon it, and lifted it so high that the men jumped off to save themselves from the fall. Mr. McKeen has frequently known him in lifting to break boom poles six inches thick. He has known him also with one hand to lift, by the rung of a chair, the chair itself and a the rung of a chair, the chair itself and a the rung of a chair, the chair itself and a man weighing nearly 200 weight. Once in attempting to lift a very heavy man he wrenched the rung entirely from the chair. Gardener one time was possessed of a balky horse with which he exercised great patience; but when patience ceased to be a virtue he would fell him to the ground with his elenched fist, striking him behind the ear. It is related of Gardener's sister that on one occasion a famous wrestler that on one occasion a famous wrestler traveled all the way from Miramichi to Tom's home in order to "try a fail with him." Tom was absent, but the sister, looking contemptuously upon the intruder, declared she could throw him herself, and, suiting the action to the word, in a fair trial threw him fairly three times in succession. oassion. The stranger's experience with the sister was sufficient; he never sought a ever known to perform was on one of the wharves in St. John. Mr. McKeen saw him lift and carry an anchor weighing 1,200 pound, numbers of other witnesses standing by, some of whom are yet alive. Frequently he has seen him carrying a barrel of pork inder each arm, and once he saw him shoulder a barrel of pork while manding in an ordinary brandy box. When about 40 years of age Gardener removed to the United States, and never returned to his native province.

It is commonly reported and believed that he met with a sad adventure on board a Mississippi steamer. A heavy bell was on board as a portion of the freight, and the captain, a great powerful fellow, was concerned as to how he should remove it from its place in order to make more room on deck. While appain and passengers were at dinner, Tom, in presence of the crew, to their utter amazement. Hifted the bell and carried it to the opposite side of the boat. When the captain returned he saked how that had been accomplished, and when Gardener laughingly remarked that he carried it there, the former gave him the lie, and as one word brought on another, he presently struck Tom in the face. This was too much, and for the first time in his life the strong man gave blow for blow; but one buffet was sufficient. The captain never spoke again, killed dead on the instant. Tom made his escape, went West, and has never been heard of since.—New Brunswock Reporter

The Infernal Regions Tapped.

Here is a strange account that comes from Marine City, Michigan: Recently, Mr. Joseph Hahn who lives three or four west of Marine City, in a small place miles west of Marine City, in a small place called Cottrellville, was engaged in sinking an artesian well for the purpose of supplying his stock with water, and used for that purpose a derrick, consisting of three pieces of timber fastened together at the top, in the shape of a tripod. This derrick was fastened by means of a heavy log clain, wound around the timber at the top, attached to which was an auger for the purpose of boring the well, which was turned by horse-power. The first portion of the well for a distance of 20 feet, had been carefully bricked up, and the boring continued from there. The diameter ing continued from there. The diameter of the well is 13 inches, and on Monday night the auger had penetrated a distance of 125 feet.

The next morning a gas chamber was penetrated, and upon the removal of the auger the wooden tubing shot out of the well, immediately tollowed by a stream of gas, water, mud, and stone that rose to the distance of nearly 260 feet in the air, when distance of nearly 260 feet in the air, when the ground shook as if an earthquake had convulsed it. Stones weighing from 10 to 20 pounds were projected in the air and fell in all directions, some of them crashed through the roof of Mr. Hahn's house and barn, and compelling his family to seek another habitation. The heavy log-chain binding the derrick was cut by the flying missiles into a dozen pieces, and the farm upon which a stone could not have been found previous to the phenomenon, was found previous to the phenomenon, was literally covered with large and small ones. The velocity of this discharge continued for eight or ten hours without intermission, when the monster was found to have spent his fury, and the stream and noise gradually subsided.

The crops of Mr. Hahn were completely determed by the falling debrie and the

The crops of Mr. Hahn were completely destroyed by the falling debris and the streams of water which ran in all directions. Many people visited the well, and many are still coming, and Mr. Hahn, to restore as nearly as possible his loss—for he is a poor man—has enclosed the well within a rall fence, and charges the inoderate sum of five cents for the satisfaction of individual enricaits. The water still hab. individual curiosity. The water, still bub-bling, may be seen at a great depth by the aid of a mirror, which reflects the sun's rays into its depths. One remarkable fact is that the brick wall of the first 20 feet of the well is entirely uninjured, and remained intact during the great convulsion. The orifice below, however, is somewhat enlarged. It is not apprehended, that we will have another eruption of this miniature

Raising an Heir Under Difficulties

A story is told of the queer doings in Germany of Mrs. Martha Seybert, a young New York woman. She appiled at several hospitals in several towns for a male child with blue eyes which she wished to adopt, but could finde none to sult her. At but could finde none to sult her. At length she saw one on the street, and she managed by some artifice to get him away from his nurse. Mrs. Seybert and the child were found by the police hiding behind a bale of goods in a railroad depot, waiting for a train. She was arrested and the child was restored to its parents. Mrs. Seybert's trial for kidnapping came on, and the facts of the case and her motives came out. Henry Seybert, a merchant of New York, had been traveling with his wife in York, had been traveling with his wife in Germany and was hastily summoned home on business. He left his wife, within a few days of her time, in Stuttgartt. Sey-bert suddenly died in New York, and left a will bequeathing his property to his child if it lived. In case of its death other provisions were made for the disposal of his property. The heir came and was very weakly. The mother started to travel with the baby when it was about two weeks old it died on her hands, and in her trying to lift a stick of timber. In all the frantic grief she threw it out of the car it. The terms of the will, which she knew. made it very desirable for her to appear in New York with a child in her arms, which she could pass off for her own. She had tried to borrow one and failed, and there seemed to be no way left her but to steal one. She acknowledged that she had stolen the boy at Gressen, intending to take him to New York. The woman appeared to be unbalanced in mind and the jury strongly recommended mercy. She was sentenced to six month imprisonment. Why and When Lamps Explode.

All explosions of coal-oil lamps are All explosions of coal-oil lamps are caused by the vapor or gas that collects in the space above the oil. When Juli of oil of course a lamp contains no gas, but immediately on lighting the lamp consumption of oil begins, soon leaving a space for gas which commences to form as the lamp warms up, and after burning a short time warms up, and after burning a short time sufficient gas will accumulate to cause an explosion. The gas in a hamp will explode only when ignited. In this respect it is like gunpowder. Cheap or inferior oil is always the most dangerous.

The flame is communicated to the gas in the following manner: The wick tube in all lamp-burners is made larger than the wick which is to pass through it. It would not do to have the wick work tightly in the burner; on the contrary, it is essential that it move up and down with perfect case. it move up and down with perfect case. In this way it is unavoidable that space in the tube is left along the sides of the wick sufficient for the flame from the burner to pass down into the lamp and explode the

Many things may occur to cause the flame to pass down the wick tube and explode the lamp.

1. A lamp may be standing on a table or mantle and a slight puff of air from the open window or a sudden opening of a door anse an explosion.

2. A lamp may be taken up quickly from a table or mautle and instantly explode.

3. A lamp is taken into an entry where there is a draft, or out of doors, and an explosion ensues.

4. A lighted lamp is taken up a flight of stairs, or is raised quickly to place it on the mantel, resulting in an explosion. In all these cases the mischief is done by the air movement—either by suddenly checking the draft or forcing air down the chimney against the flame.

5. Blowing down the chimney to extinguish the light is a frequent cause of explosion.

6. Lamp explosions have been caused by using a chimney broken out at the top or one that has a piece broken out whereby the draft is rendered variable and the flame unsteady.

7. Sometimes a thoughtless person puts a small-sized wick in a large burner, thus leaving considerable space in the tube along the edges of the wick.

8. An old burner, with its air-drafts clogged up, which rightfully should be thrown away, is sometimes continued in use, and the final result is an explosion.
