PREIGHT VIA THE COLUMBIA RIVER, VS. HELTON AND WINNEMUCCA.

tral Pacific Railroad Co., like other monopolies, where there are no legal restrictions, fix the freight tariffs at the different stations along their road as high as circumstances will permit. In some instances it is put as high as freight was when it was hauled by bull teams, before the railroad was built. The only question is in fixing a tariff, how much will such and such a place bear? Is there a chance for the people at that station to get freight by any other transportation? If so, then they must be eareful and not put the freight higher than it will bear, For instance, they say the Silver City people will bear $2_ 16 per hundred on general merchandise at Winnemuces, but the Boise City people will bear only $1,60 at Kelton, 250 miles farther on the railroad, because Boise City is thirty miles nearer the Columbia river. At Corinne the Central Pacific delivers freight for $1 per hundred for the Montana people, while they charge the Corinne people much higher.—This is because Montana can compete by the use of the Missouri river. The only remedy for this species of robbery, is by wholsome legislation. But this we cannot get; therefore the people of Silver City have resolved to abandon the shipment of goods by the C. P. railroad to Winnemucca, and will hereafter ship by the Columbia river. They ask the Boise City merchants to co-operate with them and ship goods to this place by the Columbia river route. There are three grounds of objection to the change: 1st, the Kelton route is longer during the winter. because the Goose Creek Mountains are not quite as bad as the Blue Mountains, 2nd, there are no teams on the Umatilla road, and third it will take a little longer to get goods by way of Portland from San Francisco. But now let us the lady explained that she was on a see what the advantages will be. 1st, journey to visit a relative in the West goods in Portland as cheap or cheaper name implies was an unknown luxury. han in Frisco. 2nd, the freight wil not cost to exceed $20 a ton from San Francsico to Umatilla by weight-60 for Owyhee by the hundred than they now pay on the railroad. 3d, if due notice should be given, our teamsters would turn immediately on to the Umatilla road at the same price they are getting on the Kelton road. The Silver scople might have to pay a little more, but not as much as the difference is against them on the railroad. Walla Walla Valley is full of horses and teamsters and they will make sharp competition and put freight at a low figure. Taking it all in all we believe the advantages are in favor of the Uma-

A dispatch from San Diego dated Oct. 11 says: Late advices from Temecula show that the Indian difficulties are by no means over, notwithstanding recent reports to that effect. Oligario, with his band, are collected in that vicinity holding conferences. People in that vicinity are again being alarmed. Gilbanum Bros., merchants at San Luis Rev and Monservate; have ordered goods for the latter place, to be sent to San Luis Rey, and in a letter to forwarding merchants say: "No telling how the Indian difficulty may end; therefore we deem it advisable not to ship any more goods to Monserrate." A gentleman connected with the Union office, who came in from that vicinity last night, says Goldbanum, Alvirado and other old settlers are all ready to leave on a moment's notice. Others have brought their families to the thickest settlements, Runners are going between the Alegarus and Coahuillas, Should they join him in the event of an outbreak it would be a bad time to trifle. It may bring on a collision, and war would be the result. Those Citizens who have lived here for years insist that troops should be sent into that district of country without delay to maintain peace, until the government can make suitable arrangements to maintain an Indian agent. Dryden has just returned from there, and says the danger of a conflict is not and cannot be passed autil something can be done by government for the Indians, Olegarie is a bad Indian, and has great influence with his people, and refuses to listen to mild councils. He wanted the agent to put the Indians back on the ranch where

> A MONARCH ON THE STAGE .- The Duke of Saxe-Meiningen, one of the smalest of the Thuringian States, is absorbed in the drama, and devotes the greater part of his time and resources to making his theater the best in all Germany, and it is probably without a superior in Europe. The Duke himself is an actor, and, astonishing as it may seem, he often appears publicly in that capacity-probably the first instance of a monarch becoming a regular actor. He is said to be a very fine actor, too; but he does not allow the audience to appland him as his faithful subjects would doubtless do, whether his acting was good or bad. The Duchess was an actress when he married her. It is a curious fact that although in the social scale the dramatic profession ranks lower than any other, nevertheless actresses are almost the only persons who enter the ranks of the obility from the lower walks of life.

The attaactive odor of a sweet limburger cheese was recently the cause of the arrest of a lady and the seizure of Ler trunk while upon a journey to the West. The railroad officials had noticed the overpowering reent which escaped from the lady's trunk, and the horrible suspicion that it must surely contain a dead child took such complete possession of their minds that they procured the arrest of the owner of the trunk. The trunk was searched. Some of the searchers fainted from the effec's of the odor and the seeming certainty of a tragic affair. A suspicious bundle was found and cautiously unwrapped, when the limburger our merchants can buy several kinds of to whom a "limburger" with all that

There don't appear to be much limit to a farm laborer's hours. A man who has been working for a New Canaan farmer, putting in thirteen to sixteen hours a day, quit on Saturday. "What's the matter? don't you like the place?" asked the farmer. "O' yes, I like the place well enough," explained the hand, "but the nights are getting so long I'm afraid I can't do a full day's work." The farmer smiled like an invalid .-Danbury News-

WANTED TO GET EVEN .- An attache of the Booklyn N. Y., ferry company, whose duty consisted in closing the gates upon passengers when the poats were ready to leave, died the other day, and in the funeral turn out the most conspicuous figure was that of an old man who occupied a buggy, from which was waving an American flag. Just as the order came to start the fimeral, the old man drove into line. One of the friends of the deceased, astonished at the conduct of the old fellow, rode up to him and said: "Say, look here, old man you must have got things mixed. This ain't no torchlight procession, nor a claim chowder picnic. This is a funeral, sir." The old fellow heard all this and grimly replied: "Yes, I know what it is. It ain, t no clam bake that's a fact; but its better than a Bunker Hill jubilee for me to be here, for the man that's riding at the head of this procession shut the ferry-gute on me, when I was in a burry, just one hun-dred and sixty times in the last five years, and I'm going to get even on him someow or I ain't no free-born American citizen?" TRUTH WILL OUT. Jakey, His Ma and the Sunday School Teacher.

Jakey crept up and sat down by his mother's side as she was looking out of the win-dow yesterday morning. After a few min-utes of silence, he broke out with— "Ma ain't Pa's name Jacob?"

"Yes, Jakey."
"If I was called young Jacob, he'd becalled old Jacob, wouldn't he?" Yes, my dear; what makes you asl such a question as that?"
"Nothing, only I heard something about him last night."

"Mrs. Watts suddenly became interested. "What was it, my son?" "Oh, nothing much; something the new Sunday-school teacher said." "You oughtn't to have anything your mother don't know, Jakey," coaxingly plead Mrs. Watts. "Well if you must go poking into evry-thing I'll tell you. The new teacher says to me. 'what's your name my little and when I said Jacob, he ask me if I ever heard of old Jaoch, and I thought that was pa's name, so I told him I guess I had, but I'd like to hear what he had to say about him. He said old Jacob, used to be a little boy once just like him, and had beanshooters and stilts, and used to play hookey and got licked and used to tend cattle"— "Yes, I believe his father used to keep a w," interrupted Mrs. Watts.

"And he hogged his brother out of something or other, and he struck with a young an named Rachel Mrs. Watts became still more interested, and was Secretary Delano's resignation took effect marry her, but the old man fooled him and out. 1st, and the point at issue is whether that day shall be considered one of the ten pa said he was nobody's fool, and married them both.'

"The wretch!" ejaculated Mrs. Watts, shaking her fist at Mr. Watt's slipper. "He said old Jacob had a dozen or two children, and"——
"Did I marry him for this?" exclaime

Mrs. Watts, sobbing and throwing herself on the sofa, making all the springs hum like a set of tuning forks.

Jakey said he didn't know what she married him for, but she wouldn't catch him telling her anything very soon again if she was going to kick up such a row about it, and went out of the room highly indiguant. When Mr. Watts came home he met Mrs. Watts in the hall, with a very red face, who pointed her finger at him and jerked out the word "villain!" and asked him if he could look his innocent wife and intant son in the face. Mr. Watts showed intant son in the face. Mr. Watts showed that he could by staring very hard alternately at Jakey and Mrs. Watts.

"I know where you go, sir, when you stay away from home," continued Mrs. Watts; I've heard the story of your perfidity. Can't you tell me how Rachel and that other woman is to-day?" she asked with forced calmness. Mr. Watts confessed his inability to enlighten her on the health of the ladies about whom she was health of the heltes about whom she was solicitous. Mrs. Watts said that she always knew that something like this would occur, and ended with another hysterical interro-gation after the children's health, but not receiving any satisfactory answer, she threw herself on the soft again and sobbed and asked herself a few times why she had ever left her mother's house, and then she called Jakey to her and told him that they would have the like herself asked to her and told him that they would have to live alone in a little house and be very poor, and make not have enough to eat, which made the hopeful atter a se-ries of most doleful howls and hasten down to the kitchen to examine the larder.

Later the day Mrs. Lewis happened in, and Mrs. Watts confided to her the stoin, and Mrs. Watts confided to her the story of her husband's villainy. Of course, Mrs. Lewis was very properly shocked, and tried to impress upon Mrs. Watts the necessity of being philosophical, and left with the observation that she had never yet seen a man with a mold on his nose who did not sooner or later prove to be a rascal.

Towards evening Jakey was sitting on Towards evening Jakey was sitting on the steps, having recovered from his griet of the morning when the Sunday-school teacher chanced to pass by, and Jakey halled him with 1 "Say, mister, I told my mother what you told me about old Jacob last night, and there has been the old scratch to pay ever since. Ma called pa a villain and a bloody thief, and tried to brake her back on the sofa, and said there wouldn't be anything to eat, and there ain't been such a time since pa offered to kiss Aunt Jane good-by. Mabe you had better step in and see the old lady mister; she ain't so bad as she was." she ain't so bad as she was."

The teacher after some pressing, accompanied Jakey into the house, and was presented to Mrs. Watts in the parlor.

Mrs. Watts began to thank him for disclosing her husband's perfidity, but he disclaimed having done anything of the kind and at length, after considerable rabbing claimed having done anything of the kind and at length, after considerable talking, it was discovered that Jakey had misplaced the story of the patriarch Jacob. Mrs. Watts started right out to hunt up Jacob, and when she found him astonished him again dy being as loving as she had been distant. Jakey is contented with the fact that there is no immediate prospect of a lack of supplies in the family, and Mrs. Watts would be perfectly happy if she could only shut Mrs Lewis's mouth.
