Pacific Slopers.

Dates to December 31. On Thursday of last week the telegraph wire was stretched through La Grande amid great rejoicing. "Oregon Bill" will attend the centennial. Who Oregon Bill is we don't know. A Philadelphia paper says he will be there.

A new paper will probably be started very soon an Oakland by Mr. Sterling, who will use the material of the old Umpqua Call office.

It is estimated that not over one-half as much wheat has been sowed in the Willamette valley past fall as was put out last year by this time.

The weather in Eastern Oregon, is said to have been much more pleasant in November than it was in this valley. It might have been all that, and nothing to brag of.

On last Thursday the locomotive "Walla Walla" was ditched at Wallula. It seems that a switch had been displaced and that the locomotive ran off the track and was turned over in the ditch.

J. D. Riggs says he lost $1,000 in drafts on New York and about $225 in greenbacks, in an envelope, between Salem and Perrydale, a short time ago, and will suitably reward the finder on getting it back.

California now sends hops to Australia, and the agricultural bureau, with all the lights before it, says that Oregon can raise better crops of hops than any State in the Union. Then why not supply Australia and other markets from Oregon?

Mrs. W. G. Langford passed through La Grande on her way to Washington, D. C., during the week. She visits the Capital for the purpose of prosecuting her husband's claims to 640 acres of land within the limits of the Nez Perce Indian Reservation.

A man named Frank McCoy, mining on the Columbia river, near Fort Colville, is missing, and has not been seen for about three weeks, and as he was known to have had some trouble with the Chinamen working on the river about some water, it is feared he has been foully dealt with by them.

The Stanislaus (Cal.) News says "it has been stated on what appears pretty good authority, that the Central Pacific Railroad Company has purchased the Holladay line of railroads in Oregon, and will now crowd their connecting road between the two States to an early completion."

John Evans, indicted for the murder of a man named Wilcox, Oneida county, Idaho, some time ago, tried to hang himself recently in jail. He procured three towels, which he tied around his throat, and suspending himself to a bar tried to wander off into the unknown future, but failed in the attempt, his tongue protruding from his mouth and his eyeballs glaring wildly from their sockets. When taken down it was found that life was not extinct. He still lives. His trial has been postponed until the next term of the court at Malad.

The Boise City Statesman of the 23d instant says: "Col. H. C. Page, general route agent of Wells, Fargo & Co., arrived here night before last from Portland, Oregon. He is looking after the Boise City stage robbers. Mr. Page revokes the reward heretofore offered and now offers a reward of $3,250, $500 of which will be paid for the arrest and one-fourth of the amount of any treasure recovered."

The Kelson and Silver City stages are so horribly muddy that the stages have to drive along on a walk for many miles after leaving Boise City. There are lots of teams on the Kelson road, this side of the Cold Springs, some days unable to move at all, and when they do undertake to move they are not able to go over three or four miles.

The Salt Lake Tribune, of the 25th ult., speaks of a party of surveyors who went into the Utah country last August, and had not returned. It was learned that they had been overtaken in a snow storm in the mountains and perished. The following men composed the party: Orville Smith of Kansas, Granville H. Roper, of Oregon, Chas. Harnes of Nevada, James Brown of Salt Lake City, J. Murdoch of Heber City.

The snow was six feet deep on a dead level at Alta, Utah, on the 25th ult., and still falling.

B. M. Washburn has bought out the interest of W. I. Mayfield, his former partner, in the Walla Walla Spirit, and is now sole proprietor.

The weather has been quite cold at Idaho City. Shoveling snow is said to be the principal occupation of the citizens, with the exception of those who are wrestling with pedro and solo sixty.

From the report of the commissioner of internal revenue for the year closing June 30th, we find that the following amounts have been paid by the Territories: Idaho, $19,136; Montana, $23,660; Utah, $81,545; Washington, $21,146; Wyoming, $11,642.

The Mountaineer is told that the steamer Idaho on her way from the Cascades to the Dalles on last Monday, caught fire near the smoke stack, but was extinguished before any damage was sustained.

The Eugene City people think they have discovered a clue to the thief who has committed several burglaries in their midst recently, but unfortunately they have not discovered the thief. He has sloped.

The wreck of the Shoshone, which has so long ornamented the river bank opposite Salem, has been carried away by the late high water, and has gone a last journey to that bourne from which no steambot has ever yet returned.

The new school house at Unity, Yamhill county, is about completed and will be ready for occupancy by the 1st of January. It will be remembered that the old school building was burned last fall, since which time the district has been without a school.

A man by the name of Mathias Mock, late from Iowa, came to Barlow's gate on the 22d of November, having been lost in the mountains for 24 hours, with his feet badly frozen. All was done to make the stranger as comfortable as possible. He will most likely lose all of his toes.

A HAPPY HOME.

In a happy home there will be no fault finding, overbearing spirit; there will be no peevishness or fretfulness. Unkindness will dwell in the heart or be found in the tongue. Oh, the tears, the sighs, the wasting of life and health and strength, and all that is most to be desired in a happy home, occasioned merely by unkind words! A celebrated writer remarks to this effect, namely, that fretting and scolding seem like tearing the flesh from the bones, that we have no more right to be guilty of this sin than we have to curse and swear and steal. In a perfectly happy home all selfishness will be removed. Its members will not seek first to please themselves, but will seek to please each other. Cheerfulness is another ingredient in a happy home. How much does a sweet smile, emanating from a heart fraught with love and kindness, contribute to make a happy home? At evening how soothing is that sweet cheerfulness that is borne on the countenance of a wife and mother. How do parents and child, brother and sister, the mistress and servant, dwell with delight upon those confiding smiles that beam from the eye and burst from the inmost soul of those who are near and dear! How it listens the return of the father, lightens the cares of a mother, renders it more easy for youth to resist temptation, and drawn by the chords of affection, how it induces them, with lowly hearts, to return to the parental roof. Seek then to make home happy.

That was one of those things which no fellow can find out which suggested the idea to the little four-year old who had her nose out of joint by the late arrival of a baby brother, to pop the question to him as quick as he opened his eyes—"Say, how was God when you left?"

Nearly 23,000 barrels of apples were shipped from Adrain, Michigan, up to October 25th. Just wait till Oregon can send off her superior apples by rail across the continent—the people in the East will be enabled to see and eat the finest and best flavored fruit in the world.

The Detroit judge pronounced an awful condemnation the other day. Said he, "If Christopher Columbus had got drunk on the morning he was to sail for America, and had been led to the station house, where would America have been to-day?"

An ex-lace hall man threw an apple at a dog the other day. It missed the dog, but broke through a costly large pane of glass and caused the spoiling of a barrel of sourkraut. He loves that dog now.

Time at last sets all things even. We all know how Sapphira was killed—'lyin' did it, and now we read that in California a lady killed a lion. Sapphira—suffice it.

A French widower says that when a Frenchman loses his wife it is at first a duty to cry over his loss, and then it becomes a habit and finally a pleasure.

STATE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

At the late meeting of the Board of Managers, at Salem, the time for holding the State Fair of 1876 was approved for October 9th. Building improvements to the sum of $2,500 were authorized for the coming year; also new and better gates are to be made and placed and plank walks laid from the railroad depot to the grounds.

Premiums of $150 for the best, and $100 for the second best, will be given at the next State Fair for drilled, equipped and uniformed hand Fire Engine Companies. Why not premiums for Steamers and Hoses and Ladder Companies also?

The price of season tickets was placed at $2, and for single day, $1 each, instead of $1 50 as heretofore. That's right.

All the publishers and editors of Oregon and Washington Territory were voted thanks.

The Executive Committee are authorized to borrow money on the faith of the Society to provide ample water for the grounds.

The Executive Committee are also authorized to arrange with the Aurora Colony Restaurant folks as to a restaurant, and to erect a building with sleeping rooms above and a dining hall below. There ought also to be provided a good deal better conveniences at the Pavilion for ladies retiring rooms, and about the grounds for the accommodation of all. And, by all means, put up a "Judge's stand" at the track which will serve the purpose for which it is intended, with lots inside to the doors.

CAPTURE OF A WILD HAIRLESS HORSE.—A singular animal was caught, a few days ago, in this vicinity, by W. C. Coswar, and having no name for him we have concluded to call him the "hairless horse." This, perhaps, is one of the greatest phenomena the western hemisphere can boast of. The animal was captured in the neighborhood of Green river, seven miles north of Calhoun. He was discovered scurrying through the woods, trying to reach some horses that were grazing just inside the farm, and by opening a way for him the animal was soon captured.

On examining him he was found to be entirely destitute of a single solitary hair. In color he is a beautiful glossy black, and has the appearance of being cast of India rubber, the skin is so smooth and clean that any lady can rub him without soiling the finest kid glove. It seems that he has been captured before, and in a wild state, and still retains a portion of that proud spirit which civility cannot subdue. We have no idea where he came from, unless he escaped from some menagerie, and we have read of no such animal with any show. He is one of the most remarkable freaks of nature that ever came to light, occasionally to perplex the casual philosopher, and to provoke the unbounded astonishment of the beholder.

McLean County Correspondence Louisville Commercial.

They tell me of a widow of Leesport, Pa., who got the best— heaven bless her!—of a sewing machine agent. Her husband some time previous to his death had purchased a machine, promising to pay for it in monthly installments. He had paid nearly the entire sum when he died, and the widow was unable to make up the balance. The agent called for the machine, and the widow demanded a portion of the money that had been paid. This was refused in a surly way. The widow locked up the doors of the house, putting the keys in her pocket, and told the agent he could have the machine when he returned the money, and not before. "She took hold of him," says the account, "and a severe and prolonged tussel ensued, while the children were frightened and cried. The widow drew the agent over the hot kitchen stove, and finally succeeded in sitting him down on top of it, and held him there, while he begged piteously for mercy. "For God's sake let me go and I'll pay you back every cent your husband paid me." Being satisfied, if not partly roasted around the thighs, she pulled him off the stove and led on to him until he had paid back every one of the installments, and then she gave him two minutes time to take the machine and clear out with it.

The Tribune says: "One of the members of this colony—who, by the way, is a prominent and intelligent gentleman—called upon us recently, and informed us that there is much dissatisfaction among the colonists in regard to the character, condition and quality of the land which was selected by their president, the Rev. H. S. Parkhurst, on Hood river. Our informant states there is very little land fit for cultivation, and that it must be irrigated or it will produce crops to any great extent."

When a stranger enters Jersey City and inquires for a Blacksmith's shop, the boot-black replies: "Spects you are looking for a newspaper office, ha'n't you?"

"I don't say that the eggs that you sold me the other day were bad," said a man the other day to his grocer, "but I think the hen that laid them must have been pretty sick."

When a Detroitier was asked the other day by a traveler if he had ever been in Brooklyn, he hastened to reply: "Do look like one of that sort of men, sir?"

"What can ever be a substitute, dear John, for the affection of a sister?" "Well, sister," replied Brother John, "that, you see, depends a good deal on whose sister it is."

A French widower says that when a Frenchman loses his wife it is at first a duty to cry over his loss, and then it becomes a habit and finally a pleasure.

Stroenberg's Remarkable Career.

The Freie Presse of Vienna gives details respecting Dr. Stroenberg who was married at St. Petersburg after failing there nearly £100,000, and of whom the telegraph has been lately giving reports. Stroenberg is of Jewish origin, his full name being Baruch Hirsch Stroenberg. Born in 1823, in humble circumstances at Neidenburg, in East Prussia; he went to London in 1835 after the death of his father. Here he was received by his uncles, who were commission agents, and was shortly afterwards baptized a member of the Church of England. Gifted with great intelligence and energy, he more or less educated himself and entered journalism.

In 1848 he went to America, where he gave lessons in German, but finally realized some money by buying a cargo of damaged goods and selling them at heavy profit. With this capital he returned to London in 1849, and founded several newspapers, but six years afterwards he went to Berlin, where he was for seven years the agent of an English insurance company. In 1864, however, Stroenberg began to think of improving his fortune, and having made acquaintances at the British Embassy, by this means came to know some English capitalists with whom he contracted for the construction of the Tilsit Insterburg Railway. Within six years Stroenberg was making a dozen lines, among others those of Roumania. He had over one hundred thousand workmen in his pay, and had launched out in other enterprises. At Hanau he established a gigantic machine factory; at Dortmund and Neustadt he had smelting works and iron factories; at Antwerp and Berlin he built entire new quarters; in Prussia he bought ten estates; in Poland an entire county; in Bohemia he paid £800,000 for the splendid domain of Ziborow, where he established railway carriage works which employed 5,000 workmen.

Meanwhile he built a palace for himself in the Wilhelmstrasse at Berlin, which in decoration, luxury and accommodation surpassed that of the Emperor himself. It was to be found works by the first German and French artists—Delacroix, Meissolmer, Gerome, and others. Nor was charity on a less splendid scale. In winter he caused 10,000 portions of soup to be given daily to the poor, in addition to 2,000 pounds worth of wood. When the famine broke out in East Prussia, he sent whole trains laden with corn and potatoes to his suffering fellow countrymen. Of course, such a man had his own organs in the press, and was chosen to represent the nation. Yet he took from the Moscow Bank, which he founded, 4,308,000 roubles, and it is hinted that his future is not altogether unprovided for. No greater collapse than that of Stroenberg has probably occurred in the financial history of the country, save, perhaps, that of Law.

A St. Louis dog goes about the streets gathering cigar-stumps, which it carries home to its master. Another instance of animal severity—though politics in St. Louis must be at a low ebb when a dog takes the "stump."
