OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

THE BIG BANK FAILURE—$100,000 HOUSE—LABOR MARKET—DREW'S FAILURE—THE WOMEN'S CENTENNIAL—THE NEW HAMPSHIRE ELECTION. NEW YORK, March 20, 1876.

The failure of Daniel Drew, once the king of Wall street, produced no sensation for the old fellow nearly failed a year ago. He has been uniformly unfortunate for some years, and the boys, as he was wont to term the younger members of the board, have sneezed him unmercifully.

The effect of the failure will be bad in one sense and good in another. It will be bad because it will unsettle confidence, and make distrust. It will be good because it will compel directors to look into the management, and see what is being done with the money with which they are entrusted.

Do you remember the failure of the "gentle" banking-house of Duncan, Sherman & Co.? Of course you do; and you remember also that they didn't pay scarcely anything on the dollar, and their creditors were fearfully indignant.

THE LABOR MARKET. Is in a fearful condition. One publishing house has discharged thirty clerks since Jan. 1st, every one of whom are now out of employment, and will be till trade revives.

THE WOMEN'S CENTENNIAL. After the usual preliminary squabbling, the ladies of New York have gone to work in good earnest, resolved to have a show worth the name at the exhibition.

barest and closest possible subsistence, and they are exceedingly fortunate. Where one has work, ten have none at all, and what they are living on, Heaven only knows.

THE NEW HAMPSHIRE ELECTIONS. You can't imagine their delight with which the news of the glorious triumph in New Hampshire was received by the Republicans of New York.

country, embroidery and design in dress, in which our women can show much more creditable handiwork than anything they have yet done in painting, let alone sculpture.

DEACON ADAMS RELATES HIS EXPERIENCE. I aint ashamed to justify. What faith has done for me. When, with the naked, healthy eyes. My way I could not see.

his eyes to the great central skylight above, and dropped in to gaze upon the sightless faces of the dead. A fatal step, indeed! In another moment he had made a snatch at the heap of suggestive loveliness that lay before him.
