OFFICIAL CITY PAPER.

ALBANY, FRIDAY, JUNE 23, 1876.

FOR PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES,

R. B. HAYES.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

W. A. WHEELER.

REPUBLICAN STATE TICKET.

FOR CONGRESS,

HON. R. WILLIAMS,

of Multnomah county.

FOR PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS,

W. H. ODELL, of Lane county.
J. W. WATTS, of Yamhill county.
J. C. CARTWRIGHT, of Wasco county.

OUR CANDIDATES

Gov. R. B. HAYES, of Ohio, the nominee of the Cincinnati National Republican Convention for President of the United States, was nominated after the seventh ballot. It was generally conceded, before the meeting of the Convention, that Blaine was the man, that he had the necessary number of delegates to secure the nomination. But it seems that the great public for once were deceived, and another, Mr. Blaine's equal in every respect, a sound Republican, has received the post of honor. Gov. Hayes will receive the entire vote of the Republican party—Mr. Blaine would have received no more. Gov. Hayes is one of the first men of the age, able, consistent, prudent, honest and true—what more can the people ask at the hands of our next President? Gov. Hayes has beaten every Democrat that has been placed before him, until it has become a fixed habit with him, and he will beat any man the St. Louis Convention can or may put up against him.

HON. W. A. WHEELER, of New York, is a staunch, reliable Republican, a man of great ability, of sound judgment, and a character above reproach. He, too, will receive the entire Republican vote of the country. Both men are popular with the people, possessing sterling worth and characters for uprightness and integrity which endears them to the masses.

With two such men as standard-bearers, the Republican party will go to the polls in November united and strong, and will sweep everything before them. New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois—the four great States, will cast their electoral vote for Hayes and Wheeler, while the smaller States will fall into line, marching to the music of the Union and the Old Flag. A better selection could hardly have been made, and we unite with the true Republicans everywhere in congratulating the Cincinnati Convention on the choice they made. And now let Republicans everywhere go to work earnestly, that we may poll the largest majority, in November, for Hayes and Wheeler, ever given candidates for the highest offices in this Nation.

When a certain woman in town speaks of her "late husband" you must not conclude that she is a widow. Her husband is living, but he never comes home until midnight.

Fort Atkinson, Wisconsin, has placed the liquor license at five million dollars per year, and several saloon keepers talk of going out of business.

Ulysses S. Grant, Jr., is going to marry a Boston lady.

DISCOURAGED.

Your Democratic politician and editor is discouraged and really put out at the late National Republican Convention, because Blaine was not its nominee for the Presidency. They had made calculations on his being the nominee, and had doubtless written up column after column of "red hot" Democratic pabulum, charging upon him every crime in the decalogue, and they calculated with this "red hot" material, revamped, altered and amended from week to week to give it the appearance of new matter, to make the canvass without the usual hard scratching for ideas. The popular branch of the National Legislature, too, in the hands of the Democracy for the first time in nearly two decades, has used its five months of power in trumping up and endeavoring, in every conceivable way, to substantiate charges of corruption and wrong-doing against Blaine and others, for campaign use alone. After neglecting important and needed legislation for the country, and using every trick and device known or ever heard of, publicly and by stealth, at an expense to the country of hundreds of thousands of dollars, these Democratic "smelling committees" have failed to create even a suspicion, in any fair mind, of even a squinting at wrong-doing on the part of Blaine. No man, in or out of Congress, was ever hunted with such persistency, with such unflinching industry, and with such vindictive hate, as the ex-confederates of the present Congress have displayed in the case of Blaine—and, as the records prove, without a shadow of cause.

Although Mr. Blaine came from the ordeal put upon him by Democracy, with clean hands, every charge clearly disproved, yet had he received the nomination at the hands of the Republican National Convention, every one of the charges put forward by the ex-Confederate House against him, although disproved in the very House where made, by unanswerable and indisputable evidence, would have been hurled at him, dressed in every conceivable shape, from every Democratic stump speaker and through the columns of every Democratic sheet in the country. This is "Democratic style."

As Gov. Hayes has been selected as the Republican standard-bearer, we find even the better informed Democratic inkling nonplussed, and the worst they have been able to urge against him is that he is a "fourth-rate man," while the less informed cry out in despair, "who is Hayes?" thus blazoning their own ignorance of the man whose name is indissolubly connected with the history of his country when that country was in direst peril. The noble efforts put forth by Gov. Hays in defence of the Union, in defence of human rights and human liberty, has made for him a name that will be handed down through the ages with love and veneration as long time shall last.

Thus it will be seen at a glance, from the above and other reasons that might be adduced, Democrats are discouraged at the very turn-loose, and are half whipped before the canvass is fairly opened. The St. Louis Convention, just as likely as not, will result in another Greeley sell-out, and Gov. Hayes will quietly walk over the track into the White House with scarcely a show of opposition.

The net immigration to the United States last year was 191,231, of which two-thirds were males. In former years the proportion has always been in favor of the females.

Barren of Good Results.

The Democrats have had full control of the House of Representatives for the past six months. What have they done to merit public confidence and future support? Nothing! Their labors have been barren of any good results. The people's time and money have been recklessly squandered on fruitless investigations, started for no other purpose than to give the Democratic party a little political capital in the Presidential campaign. They will not only fail to secure this capital, but they are likely to lose what little they had formerly gained.

An immense ratification meeting, the largest since the rebellion, was held in Washington on the night of the 19th, the utmost enthusiasm prevailing. Gen. Logan presided, and speeches were made by Sherman, Morton, Frelinghuysen, Oglesby, Taft and Butler. After the adjournment of the meeting, the crowd proceeded to the residence of Blaine, who, in a brief speech, pronounced the nominees of the Cincinnati Convention as the most acceptable to the masses that could have been made. He heartily endorses the nominees.

Not long ago a billiard player in London in lighting his cigar accidentally let his match fall on a billiard ball, which at once began to burn with a flame that could not be extinguished. It was apparently an ivory ball, but was made of celluloid, a mixture of gun-cotton and camphor, compressed and dried.

Some uptown boys, just for fun, the other day undertook to play parliament up in the attic, and had a train of newspapers and gunpowder laid to imitate the Guy Fawkes affair. But the old man dropped in on them suddenly with a cowhide, in the character of a "Liberal whip," and prorogued both houses without going through the customary forms of adjournment.

This is from the St. Louis Globe Democrat: "It is said that George Washington did not know what fear was. True enough; but he never passed along the platform of a railroad depot while Jeremiah S. Black was squirting tobacco juice out of the car window."

It is reported that Blaine is to be appointed Senator to fill Morrill's unexpired term. If this should prove true the ex-Confederates in the House will be made inexpressibly happy, as they have a righteous fear of Blaine from the repeated skinnings received at his hands.

The enthusiastic ratification meetings held all over the country, evidence the popularity in which our candidates are held by the people. Not a particle of dissatisfaction appears anywhere, and their election is a foregone conclusion.

She was a young lady from Chicago, and he asked her if she would take an ice cream, and she gently answered: "If it's good, square, confectioner's cream, I'm there; but if it's Church fair or strawberry festival slush, count me out."

"Harry, give me a bite of your apple," said one little fellow to another. "No," refused Harry, eating away rapidly "You wouldn't like this; it is a cooking apple."

The following description is from the New York Post's Centennial correspondent:

To many visitors Machinery Hall is the most interesting building on the Centennial grounds. Its construction closely resembles that of the Main Exhibition Building which I described yesterday, and whose north front is upon the same line, thus making Elm avenue an almost unbroken length of 3,824 feet. It is 1,360 feet long and 360 feet wide; it covers about fourteen acres, and cost $542,300.

On entering the edifice at the western end the sight is picturesque and impressive. Almost every sort of machinery in existence, from a locomotive to a paper-folder, is in active operation. The persons employed to work them are now fairly started in their tasks, and the prospect of six months in the building seems to make them feel at home. The central object of interest is the magnificent Corliss engine, made in Providence, R. I., which furnishes the motive power for all the machinery that is not self-propelling. It consists of an immense fly-wheel, 30 feet in diameter, two feet in thickness and 56 tons weight, caused to revolve at the rate of 36 revolutions a minute by the piston rods of two cylinders: and so silently does it perform its work that even when close beside it you can hear the lowest tones of your companion's voice. Below it is the main shaft, which by gear-wheels six feet in diameter connects with eight lines of shafting each 635 feet long, running lengthwise under the roof, and communicating their motion by leather belts to the various machinery on the floor.

This machinery is of the most ingenious and various description, and consists of apparatus used in mining; in working metal, wood and stone; in spinning, weaving, felting and paper making; in sewing and the manufacture of clothing and ornamental objects; in type-setting, printing, stamping, embossing, book making and paper working; in producing and transmitting power in pumping, hoisting and lifting by hydraulic and pneumatic force; in manufacturing locomotives and railway rolling stock; in preparing agricultural products, and in aerial, pneumatic and water transportation. While sauntering along the aisles one can witness the processes of rock drilling, of well and shaft boring, of coal cutting, of electroplating, of planing, sawing, veneering, grooving, mortising, tonguing, cutting, molding, stamping and carving; of drilling, slotting, turning, punching and coining; of rolling iron, grinding glass, casting metals, and riveting, nailing, bolting and tacking them by steam; of manufacturing silk, cotton, wool and linen goods, rope, twine, paper and felt; of india rubber goods, mixed fabrics and wire cloth; type casting and stereotyping, and thousands of other things that we could not even briefly mention did we take up the entire paper. Indeed it is not too much to say that an extraordinary lifetime might be spent in examining the apparatus, the processes and the results presented in Machinery Hall. The vast structure, with the exception, perhaps, of some of the persons who are visiting it, does not contain a single object not interesting or instructive.

Mart. Brown has lost his gold headed gutta-purca cane—said to have been stolen. This is bad on Mart, as he's gutta-purca another cane.

Mrs. W. D. Belding is reported dangerously ill at her residence in this city.

Owing to continued illness in the editor's family, and other causes, he is desirous of "talking a walk," and will therefore sell the REGISTER office for about half what it is really worth. It is a complete news and job office. If you mean business, come to see us.

REPUBLICAN STATE PLATFORM.

The Republican party of Oregon, in convention assembled, makes this declaration of its principles and policy:

Resolved, That in this Centennial year of American Independence we again affirm our devotion to those fundamental principles upon which the republic and the Republican party were founded. Among these are:

1. Unswerving fidelity to the constitution and the perpetuity of the Union.
2. The preservation of the liberties and equal rights of all citizens throughout the nation, and the impartial administration of the laws in every part of the country, for the protection and enforcement of public and private rights and the punishment of violence and crimes.
3. Pure and economical administration of every department of the government, State and national, and we pledge the support of the Republican party to all measures honestly proposed and wisely designed to promote the moral and material prosperity of the people.
4. That a well instructed people alone can be permanently free, it is therefore essential that the public school system shall be maintained in order that every child may receive such education as will fit him for useful citizenship, and we are unalterably opposed to any division of public school money for any purpose whatever.
5. That while we are in favor of a revenue for the support of the general government by duties upon imports, sound policy requires such adjustment of those imposts as to encourage the development of the industrial interest of the whole country, and we commend that policy of national exchange which secures to the working men liberal wages, to agriculture remunerative prices, to mechanics and manufacturers an adequate reward for their skill, labor and enterprise, and to the nation commercial prosperity and independence.
6. That the best interests of all citizens of every condition and pursuit imperatively demand the speediest return to a specie basis of values and currency, and we hail with gratification the act of a Republican Congress definitely providing for that end.
7. That we are in favor of untiring prosecution and punishment of public fraud and crime, straw-bidding and speculation in office, wherever existing, and we repeat the injunction, "Let no guilty man escape."
8. We demand that our national candidates shall be men of tried integrity, who will carry out this policy of reform, and preserve inviolate the great results of the war.
9. We arraign the present State administration and its supporters as corrupt and profligate. They have robbed the common school fund; they have been guilty of partisan legislation; they have squandered our patrimony in lands, and heaped upon us a debt of over $300,000 in direct violation of the constitution.
