Are having a hard time of it. There are now in New York over three hundred first class actresses out of engagements, with no earthly prospect of having anything to do next season. The theatres in the interior all lost money last season, and many of them will not open at all this fall. I mention this to show the thousands of young men and women who are crazy for the stage that it is not all gold that glitters. An actor or actress out of an engagement is the most utterly helpless individual in the world. There isn't anything that he or she can turn to for a livelihood; and when business is dull in the profession it means starvation. Only one theatre in Tremble and start at wagging of a straw! New York made a dollar last year, and those now opening have cut salaries down to almost nothing, or have made them depend entirely upon the business done.
