pleasure to pay a visit to the College on last Friday atternoon. The building is a Things that passed in days of yore ; yery commodious one, and nicely located. Preparations are under way to ornament the grounds with shade and evergreen trees, which will greatly add to the beauty and appearance of the institution. As this was the usual time for rhetorical exercises, we found Prof. Powell, with his able assistant teachers and students, all assembled in the chapel. The exercises consisted of essays, recitations and songs. Space will hardly admit of speaking of the lifferent performers and the merits of their performance ; suffice it to say, all acquitted themselves creditably. It might not be amiss to mention that Miss Maggie Foster and Anna Clark, with one or two pleasing and satisfactory way. They seemed perfectly at ease, and entered with spirit and feeling into their recitations. Some of the essays showed that much time and thought had been given in their preparation. The singing was entered into by the entire school, and was fully appreciated by the visitors present. The school numbers some one hundred and fifty pupils, and is gradually increas-

While I nodded, nearly sleeping, Gently came a something creeping Up my back like water leaping-Leaping upward from the floor: "Tis a cooling breeze," I muttered, "From the regions 'neath the floor-Only this and nothing more !" Ah! distinctly I remember-It was in that wet September, When the earth and every member Of creation that it bore Had for days and weeks been soaking In the meanest, most provoking Foggy rains that, without joking, We had ever seen before ; So I knew it must be very Cold and damp beneath the floor-Very cold beneath the floor !

So I sat me nearly napping In the sunshine, stretching, gaping, Craving water, but delighted With the breeze from 'neath the floor: Till I found me waxing colder. And the stretching growing bolder, And myself a feeling older-Older than I'd felt before ;

Feeling that my joints were stiffer Than they were in days of yore-Stiffer than they'd been before !

All along my back the creeping Soon gave place to rushing, leaping, As if countless frozen demons Had concluded to explore All the cavities--"the varmints !" 'Twixt me and my nether garments, Up into my hair and downward Through my boots into the floor;

Then I found myself a-shaking, Gently first but more and more-Every moment more and more.

"I'was the "ager !" And it shook me In my very clothes, and took me Shaken to the kitchen-every Place where there was warmth in store; Shaking till the dishes clattered, Shaking till the tea was spattered, Slaking, and with all my warming

Feeling colder than before ; Shaking till it had exhausted All its powers to shake me more-Till it could not shake me more !

Then it rested till the morrow, Then resumed, with all the horror That it had the face to borrow, Shaking, shaking as before; And from that day in September-Day that I shall long remember-It has made diurnal visits. Shaking, shaking on so sore ! Shaking off my boots, and shaking Me to bed, it nothing more-Fully this and nothing more! And to-day the swallows flitting Round my cottage see me sitting Moodily within the snushine Just inside my silent door-Waiting for the "ager," seeming Like a man forever dreaming ; And the sunlight on me streaming Throws up shadow on the floor-For I am too thin and sallow To make shadows on the floor-Nary shadow any more !

Aucodote of a Newfoundland Dog.

A gentleman connected with the Newbundland fishery was once possessed of a dog of singular fidelity and sagacity. On one occasion a boat and a crew in his employ were in circumstances of consider-able peril, just outside a line of breakers, which-owing to some change in wind or weather-had, since the departure of the oat, rendered the return passage through them most hazardous. The spectators on the shore were quite unable to render any assistance to their friends affoat. Much time had been spent, and the danger seem-ed to increase rather than diminish. Our friend, the dog, looked on for a length of d Picture Frames. time, evidently aware of there being great within their reach, but continued swim-ming about a short distance from them.
