QUEER FREAK OF A PORKER .- An old Republican friend who lives less than a hundred miles from this city, on the morning of the late Presidential election, was the owner of a fine, large, fat porker, that would probably weigh 250 pounds. On the morning of the election a neighbor, on his way to the polls, called and invited our friend (whom we shall call Xerxes, simply because that isn't his name) to accompany him and cast his vote for Hayes. Xerxes refused, giving as a reason that he hadn't the time to spare. That evening Mr. Porker didn't make his appearance, nor the next morning, nor the next, and X. started out to find the missing animal; but dillgent search and inquiry failed to give any trace of his missing swineship, and he was given up for lost. But lo and behold! on office that lost swine made his appearance, be very large. in good health but fearfully thin in flesh. Finding that his master didn't intend to and is ready to undertake any work in his vote, he had rooted his way into a straw pile, and there remained until Haves was duly placed in the position to which he was elected by the people. If there is a lesson to be learned from the above true story, we are more than repaid for writing it. Selah.

Numerous speeches were made, the band played several popular airs, and everybody seemed full of enthusiasm and fully determined that the road shall be built. After the ceremonies at the hall, the people formed in procession and marched to the point selected for "breaking ground" for the Yaquina Bay Railroad, led by the band and such pioneers as Rev. J. W. York, Uncle George Spencer, W. F. Dixon, D. Irvin and Mesdames Avery, Mulkey, Robinson, Trimble, York, and others. Judge Chenoweth, President of the road, carried the spade which was to be used in the ceremony of breaking ground for the road. and escorting Mrs. J. C.
