JNO. TRAVERSE

The estimation in which the "Parson" is hold a bome, may be judged from the following apostrophe by a Tennessee poet:

Ransack the recking lists of crime That stretch th' world's history along ; Uncrust the cankering beds of slime. Stonghod by the train of human wrong; Read on each brow the brand of guilt Writ by mankind's indignant scorn, And let the soul within you wilt, To know no wretch was ever born Adown whose life has run more shame

What, curse you? Ay from every stone On the green sward of Tennesses, Should gush the awful monotone That tells your monstrous infamy; Curse you? Why, every mountain peak Should find a tongue to damn your name ; The hills should hear the valleys shrick Your immertality of shame;

Than clusters round your hated name.

We curse you! Ay, but not with death, The' hell were your too certain doom; We would not have your viper breath Stopped by the gateway of the tomb; Our wish could frame no punishment So great as this-live on-live on-Live on-until your shame is sent From soit to west, from zone to zone; Live on antil your deeds have won

Each brooklet, in its winding course,

Should bubble its vindictive curse.

Live on -until your vile renown Has spanned the latitude of earth; Live on-until the world shall frown That such a monster e'er had birth! Live on-'till nature blush to own The burlesque on ber handieraft! Live on-until the gall you've strewn By your own arid lips is quaffed ! Live ou-'till death, a priceless boon, Were worth ten thousand lives-live on!

Perpetual hate-live on-live on.

We hear your fiendish sleuth-hounds bay Around our desecrated homes, Their fangs are whetted for the fray ; Wo, wo, the hapless wretch who comes Aeross the path your vengeance marks ; 'Twere better he had ne'er been born Than dare the desolating sharks
By whom our mother's breast is torn; For every sex and every age Alike are victims to your rage.

Go on; tear down the ballot-box, And chain the freeman's thunders fast; The basest villainy comes last. Rally your bands of cringing hnaves! Bar fast your legislative doors! Bid freemen yield themselves your slaves! Strike deep, the victory may be yours! Break down the props of freedom s cause, And human rights and human laws.

Live on-'till all the winds you've sown Shall howl in whirlwinds round your patl 'Till every belt of hate von've thrown Burst on your head in righteous wrath ! 'Till every curse your lips have tossed, Shall turn to torture on your brain; Praying for death to hide your shame, Live on-the world's one branded name
