VOL. V.

A CAMPAIGN POEM. Rouse ye Democratic legions.

Hear ye not the joyful sound,
From the sunny South to frozen regions,
The waking millions pass it round ! Rouse ye from your listless slumbers. To the dangers of the hour,

(Published by request.)

Rouse ye n w, in countless number , To crush for aye the tyrant's power. Too long have freemen been degraded
Beneath this abolition reign;
Too long have freemen grouned unaided,
Too long have worn the felon's chain;
A brighter day of hope is breaking.
The dreadful night is almost passed;
The Degravatic long are waking. The Democratic losts are waking-Waking to the truth at last.

Let your watchword, "Up and ready," Ring along your solid lines, Be your action cool and steady, Heaven's blessings on you shine. Faction trembles in her tower, The hand-writing is on the wall. Millions of freemen rise in power— Usurpers, tyrants now must fall.

Our shoddy despot now is shaking In his boots of patent leather; Most careful moves he still is making, To be prepared for stormy weather He thinks the sky looks rather dark, He hears the distant thunder roll, And says, "perhaps I've missed my mark, These white men, maybe, have a soul."

He is beating up for volunteers Of every kind and every feature; And says he really has no fears, But that the lowest human creature-The Hottentot, the Caffre, Digger, Or Chinese John, with long pig-tail, Or royal flat-foot Guinea nigger, Will just exactly fill the bill.

The door is opened wide and free, No bound is on the franchise laid, And all the world may come and see How loyal voters now are made; The thing is very neatly done, Of candidates there is no lack, One question arked, and only one, "Inside or out, pray is he black?"

When first this abolition panic Commenced in Boston's pious bord rs, The Yankee hoots with real Satanie, Enlisted and r holy orders, "To free the poor, down trodden slave;" To break a sunder cuffee's chains, "To free the black," "the Union save," And a foothold get in Dixic's plains.

Long years have passed of bloody strife, Our fathers, brothers, sons, Have nobly shared the loss of life-Brave, noble, martyred ones; Their b nes are bleaching far and wide, On the battle's sanguine sod, Where they so oft the foe defied, For freemen's rights and G d.

To-day a change o'er all the land, A striking chavge we see ; A change that bids us firmly stand, And strike for liberty; The clouds still lower, our focs are strong, We must be true and brave, The struggle may be fierce and long,

Then raily round the standard, men, Roll back the tide of shame; Let tyrants hear your shout again, They hear and tremble at the name, For freemen ne'er to man will yield.
The rights that God has given;
Fut first and foremest on the field,
Defaul the gits of He v n.

Jenny Lind gave a concert in Wa hing the Radical State Convention at Portland, speech of Hon. S. S. Cox, on the Virginia Convention of 1868. That Mr. Cox treats the subject in the right spirit, will not admit of serious argument. The idea that in a government of the people, all future ages and generations are to be bound by the acts of their predecessors is simply ridicuted to the Congress of their predecessors is simply ridicuted to the laws of our National Legislations, and the fact that the Congress the Monse of the United States should not only sanction such a provision, but make it policy of the administration of President.
