THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

The message of the President is too lengthy a document for us to publish, and we shall give a plain summary of the various statements made in it. After a reference to the national prosperity of our country, he gives particulars of the protection afforded by the Minister of the United States to foreigners in France, and explains the attitude of this country towards the French nation; also of the proposal to mediate, jointly with European nations, for the purpose of securing peace.

ALABAMA CLAIMS. After stating that no conclusion has been arrived at for the settlement of this vexed question, and the difference of opinion that prevails between the two nations, the President says: The Cabinet of London, so far as its views have been expressed, does not appear to be willing to concede that Her Majesty's Government was guilty of negligence, or did, or permitted any act during the war by which the United States has just cause of complaint. Our firm and unaltered convictions are directly the reverse.

REVENUE REFORM. The tax collected from the people has been reduced more than eight million dollars per annum, by steadiness in our present course; there is no reason why, in a few short years, the national tax gatherer may not disappear from the citizen's door almost entirely.

PROPOSED ACQUISITION OF SAN DOMINGO. The President repeats his conviction that the best interests of the country require the ratification of the Treaty for the purchase of that Island. He intimates that there is danger that European nations will secure the Bay of Samana as a free port, if we do not speedily complete that purchase.

THE HOTEL OMNIBUS. Will always be at the Railroad Depot and Steamboat Landing on the arrival of Passengers, to convey them and their baggage to and from the Hotel free of charge.

THE POET FRIENDS OF SALT LAKE.

Here is the woman who, from the beginning, has led in all the representative movements of the church. She is, in fact, the type of Mormon civilization in its prophetic and priestly character on the woman's side; and being also "Zion's Poetess," as well as High Priestess, she is, moreover, the type of the idealities of Mormonism.

There is a religious romance in the life of this woman. In her young womanhood she worshipped the Mormon prophet, and religious idolatry of the man drew her into the tenderest relationship with him. Nature, as well as destiny, had made them spiritual mates, and she became Joseph's bride of eternity. From that day the Saints have looked upon Eliza B. Snow as the celestial queen of the church.

The young poetess wrote talented eulogies on the prophet, which paraded the quality of palms to the deity. Undoubtedly, this charmed Joseph, for he was of a strong, affectionate nature, and he loved his disciples as much as they adored him.

Unlike the self-conscious Brigham Young, who cares but little about the approbation of others, but everything for his own will and purposes, Joseph was captured by the praise of his disciples, either male or female. Tender or ardent words completely conquered him; and sometimes his weakness in this placed him in the hands of his friends. How, then, could he resist the religious idolatry of this beautiful and gifted "daughter of Zion?"

Her head was finely organized; her forehead classical, but not broad; her nose of the artist type; her mouth elegant and worshipful in its expression, rather than powerful or masculine; her neck swan-like; her hair luxuriant and dark as the raven's plume; her eyebrows and lashes plentiful and soft, and within the eyes which she shaded burned the fire of prophecy.

"Sister Eliza" was the prophet's kindred spirit—his other half—his certain self. Who could doubt it? Certainly not a young seer, who, though married to the masculine Emma Hale, was now, for the first time, ravished with ideal love. Emma, Joseph's first wife, was the most marked woman of the church at that time, but she represented strength of character, not the gentle, clinging wife.

She was, however, as a rod of iron upon which Joseph could lean, and from a rod of iron to smite him to the earth and divide his kingdom against him, as she has since done in raising the rival prophet's plume; her first husband, Joseph, her first love, Joseph was Eliza's God, and it was delightful for him to retire from the strong-minded, iron-willed first wife into the heart of Zion's high priestess—this woman of plastic genius and hero-worshipping nature.

It is scarcely wonderful that out of the romance of the young prophet's life—for Joseph was not yet forty at his martyrdom—there should have grown up polygamic relations.

On one side there were adoring women, like Eliza B. Snow, young, gifted and beautiful; on the other hand a masterful first wife, who saw not in her prophet husband her idol, neither as a woman or a disciple. Indeed, I believe Emma, the first wife, rather despised her husband than worshipped him, while Eliza, the poetess, and the two handsome daughters of Bishop Edward Partridge, worshipped at the prophet's shrine, and they became his wives.

These women are still among the female leaders of Mormonism, and Emma Hale Partridge and Eliza B. Snow are now numbered among the wives of Brigham Young, who stands as the great proxy of Joseph Smith.

Undoubtedly Brigham would have taken Emma Hale as well, but the first wife of the Prophet hated Brigham Young even more than she despised her husband, and so the celestial queenship of the church fell upon Eliza B. Snow.

But Eliza's love for Joseph, and his love for her was Platonic. They never were actually husband and wife; neither was she, in this sense, been the wife of any man. She is still among the "Virgins of Israel," and in her life has been more of a nun, wedded to her Lord, than the wife of a mortal. This is the reason why she has always been called in the Church, "Miss Eliza B. Snow."

The Hebrew constitution of the mind of Eliza B. Snow is well illustrated in the poem of her opening life as a "saint."

"My heart is fixed—I know in whom I trust." Sister Eliza soars to a higher sphere than that of earth, and God, not nature, is the source of her inspirations. She is well illustrated in her "Colored Lady's Address to the Eternal Father and Mother"—God—commencing:

"Did your honor speak to me?" "I did, sir; I said that in my opinion you disgrace yourself and family, the court, and the profession to which you belong, by your conduct."

"My father, thou that dwellest in thy high and holy places, when shall I regain thy presence? When shall I behold thy face? When shall I hear thy voice? When shall I see thy hand? When shall I feel thy arm? When shall I taste thy mercy? When shall I smell thy grace? When shall I drink thy love? When shall I eat thy life? When shall I be thy people? When shall I be thy kingdom? When shall I be thy glory? When shall I be thy praise? When shall I be thy honor? When shall I be thy name? When shall I be thy fame? When shall I be thy power? When shall I be thy might? When shall I be thy strength? When shall I be thy wisdom? When shall I be thy knowledge? When shall I be thy understanding? When shall I be thy counsel? When shall I be thy will?
