KATE MAYO'S RESOLVE

BY AMY BANDOLPH.

ATTORNEY AT LAW AND NOTARY PUBLIC. "I don't believe in love in a cottage," said Kate Mayo, looking defi-antly round. "I, for one, mean to marry rich!"

Miss Mayo shook the tiny golden ringlets that hung like spirals of sunshine over her pretty forehead, while a mischievous sparkle came into her blue eyes; she rather seemed to enjoy the consternation she had created.

"But who is he, Kate?"

"Well," Kate Msyo, "I mean it.—
Who wants to be a drudge, in an illfitting calico dress and last year's style of bonnet, just because some idiotic young man asks you to be his wife? My taste is for thread-lace shawls and moire antiques, and bonnets that look as if they had floated

"Poor fellow!" said Helen reflectively.

"What do you say that for?" asked Kate, suddenly turning round upon her cousin.

her own command, as if she were crowned queen of her destiny. And she was, in so far as wit and beauty Kate's part. she was, in so far as wit and beauty and certain royalty of self-possession may constitute the sceptre of one's own existence. Tall and gracefully formed as a Greek statute, her loveliness took you as it were by storm. She was fair as the waxen leaf of a April showers, succeeded by brief

"I can't help it, aunt," was Kate's rejoinder. "I am mercenary." "At your age, Kate?"
"What difference does age make, I wonder?" said the beauty, with a petulant shrug of her shoulders.—

only made Kate Mayo laugh. Miss Mayo was decidedly a "success" in the brilliant circles of metropolitan society that winter. It was not entirely her faultless beauty, nor her quick readiness of rapartee, nor yet the bewitching confidence with which she seemed to take the with which she seemed to take the with their carriage, "all the girls are envying you. "But that's no sign you never will, aunt," said Kate. Evidently the mischievous elf enjoyed the old lady's

"But Kate," suggested little Helen,
who had sat by demurely listening,
"suppose you fall in love with somebody else?" "Me fall in love!" said Kate, with a merry, mocking laugh, "Rest

Things were at this interesting

Things were at this interesting juncture when, one delicious moonlight evening, Miss Mayo went up to the Central Park to skate, and came back under convoy of a tall, handsome young man, who had been introduced to her there.

"Did you say his name was St. John?" asked curious Helen, when the cavalier servanic had gone. "Oh, Kate, how handsome he is!"

"Nothing of the kind," said Kate, artly; "only rather pleasant looking."

"But who is he, Kate?"

"Oh, I don't know; a clerk in some bank, I believe."

"What do you say that for?" asked Kate, suddenly turning round upon her causin.

"Because, Kate, if he is poor and obscure, and has come within the magic circle of your fascinations."

L'Overture listens to the constant whispers of independence.

And there is still that other question of debts and obligations, acknowledged and unacknowled, with an immense claim by Hayti, and an unsettled boundary, which I have already called a blood law-suit. These annexations I state only in the meanwhile to my mind. There is something better than belligerent intervention and acts of war which menace an absorption of an untold cost of treasure. It is a sincere and humane effort on our part in the spirit of peace to reconcile Hayti and Dominica and establish tranquility throughout the island. Let this be attempted and our republic will become throughout the island. Let this be attempted and our republic will become an example worthy of its name and the civilization which it represents, while the republican institutions have new glory. The blessings of all good men would attend such an effort, nor would the smile of heaven be wanting, and may we not justly expect of the President to unite in such a measure of peace and good will. He that ruleth his spirit is greater than he that taketh a city. And so the President who in ruling his spirit in subjection to humane principles of international law and constitution; his country will be greater than if he had taken all the islands of the and expected them to observe a strict and expected them to observe a strict neutrality in reference to the internal affairs of San Domingo. Vice President in the chair—I can not consent that there shall be any manifestations of approval or disapproval in the galleries, and if they are repeated I must enforce the orders of the Senate. Summer proceeded: Now as I desire the suppression of the Ku Klux where it exists or shows itself in the elevation of the African race, I insist that the President's scheme, which instills Ku Klux on the coasts of San Domingo, and which at the same time insults the African race in the black republic, shall be fairly represented. I speak now of that Ku Klux of which the President is the declared head, and I speak for the African race, whom the President has trampled down. Is there any Senator in earnest against the Ku Klux, let him arrest those on the coast of San Domingo. Is there any other Senator ready at all times to seek the elevation of the African race, here is an occasion for his best efforts.

(From the Concert (N. H.) People.)
THE NEW HAMPSHIRE VIC-

It is done. New Hampshire is redeemed. The Democratic banner once more waves in triumph over our granite hills. The dark night of fifteen years of Radical rule is succeeded at last by glorious day. James A. Weston is to be our next Governor, and three honest Democrats and true patriots will succeed the late Radical delegation in Congress. Well may the dauntless Democracy of New Hampshire rejoice as they do to-day, and thousands of patriotic men who have heretofore been their opponents join them in their rejoicing.

Ours is not a mere party triumph in the narrow sense of the word. It is a triumph of honesty over corrup-tion, of justice over oppression, of State Rights and the free ballot over Federal dictation and Presidential usurpation. It is a blow struck for ent intervention—while a distinct and fundamental principle of the constitution which deprives the President of the kingly prerogative, is disregarded, and this very kingly prerogative is asserted, by the President, This is the simplest statement. Looking still further at the facts, we see that all this disobedience has for its object the acquisition of an outlying gance, unjust taxation, class legisla-tion and military intimidation. It object the acquisition of an outlying tropical island with a large promise of wealth, and in carrying out this scheme, our government has forcibly maintained a naurner in power that

AN HOUR AT THE OLD PLAY-GROUND. BY MENRY MONFORD.

I sat an hour to-day, John,
Beside the old brook stream,
Where we were schoel-boys in olden times,
When manhood was a draam.
The brook is choked with fallen leaves,
The pond is dried away—
Lacarce believe that you would know
The dear old place to-day.

The school-house is no more, John, Bennath our locust trees; The wild lose by the window side No more waves in the breeze;
The scattered stones look desolate,
The sod they rested on.
Has been plowed up by stranger hands;
Since you and I were gone.

The chestnut tree is dead, John.

And what is sudder now—
The broken grape vine of our swing
Hangs on the withered bough;
I read our names upon the bark,
And found the pebbles rare
Laid up beneath the bollow side,
As we had piled them there.

Beneath the grass-grown bank, John, I looked for our old spring.

That bubbled down the alder path Three paces from the swing;

The rushes grow upon the brink.

The pool is black and bare.

And not a foot this many a Gay,

It seems, has trodden there.

I took the old blind road, John, That wandered up the hill;
Tis darker than it used to be,
And seems so lone and still! The birds yet sing upon the boughs, Where once the sweet grapes hung, But not a voice of human kind
