

The worst tyrant in the universe is the wife of a henpecked husband.

We are all of us too apt to judge of the cloth in a man's coat by the fashion it is cut in.

Most people report on their sins by thanking God that they are not so wicked as other pholks are.

He who is vain of his virtues (if he is sure he has got them), has the best and only excuse there is for vanity.

Morality is the bread of a literary reputation, but brains mix with morality is the bread and butter of it.

Trying to please everybody is like trying to apologize to a lot of hornets for running against their nest.

Those who never have had anything at home, when they do travel, seem to do it on purpose to find fault.

The man who expects to get ahead here held by pulling others back, is not going to get a grate ways from where he started.

I am allured dreadfully afraid of those men who travel on their virtue; I have discovered that about half of them are idiots, and the other half are rascals.

I am in favour of the utmost possible liberty, both for the soul and body, but I never expect to see human nature well broke enough to drive without any bits.

There is 2 kinds of prominent phools in the world, those who know they are phools and those who don't know it. The former often are shrewd enough to make their phooly pay well.

At the present rate of proceeding, it will be as difficult one hundred years from now to find a honest man filling a place or trust as it will to find an angel traveling around loose, out of a job.

I suppose if there want a solitary human being on the face of the earth, the sun would still rise in the east and set in the west, the volcanoes would occasionally vomit fire, and Niagara would keep on roaring, but there's lots of phools who don't think so.

AN INDEX TO MARRIAGE.

It does not require an astrologer, a medium or a gipsy with a direct pack of cards. It is very simple—lies in a nut-shell and can be expressed in a few words. They are these: The last person you would naturally think of.

If a girl expresses a fondness for majestic men with large whiskers, make up your mind that she will marry a very small man with none.

If she declares that "mind" is all she looks for, expect to see her stand before the altar with a pretty fellow who has just sense enough to tie the cravat bow. If, on the contrary, she declares she must have a handsome husband, look about you for the plainest person in her circle of acquaintance, and declare "that is the man," for it will be.

Men are almost as bad. The gentleman who desires a wife with a mind and mission, marries a lispng baby who screams at the sight of a mouse, and hides her head when she hears a sudden knock at the door. And the gentleman who dreaded anything like strong-mindedness, exults in the fact that his wife is exactly everything he declared he detected.

If a girl says of one "Marry him! I'd rather die," look upon the affair as settled, and expect cards to the wedding of those two people.

If a man remarks of a lady, "Not any style at all" await patiently the appearance of his name in the matrimonial column in connection with that very lady.

And if any two people declare themselves "friends, and nothing more," you may know what will come next.

There is no hypocrisy in all this, and such matches are invariably the happiest. People do not know themselves, and make great mistakes about their intentions. Love is terribly perplexing when he first begins to upset one's theories, and when his arrow first pierces the heart there is such a fluttering there that it is hard to guess the cause. Besides, man proposes and God disposes, and it is the "I don't know what" with which people fall in love, and not those peculiarities which could be given in a passport.

A granger brick yard has been established at Council Bluffs, Iowa, which will manufacture 2,000,000 brick this summer.
