gle on the part of the people, for right; on the other, the campaign will be equally stern and persistent on the part of those now in power, for wrong. The combat will be terrible; the nation will be made to rock from center to circumference, by the mighty efforts which will be set on foot by both political factions. We predict that the contest, however hotly waged by the Republican party will result in victory to Democracy. We can but think that after a fair and dispassionate canvass upon the real issues now upon us, an overwhetming majority of the people will prefer Democratic principles.
