od for effectually destroying insect pests; both indoors and out: Take a barrel half filled with coal tar and fill it with water and let it stand awhile. Then the water may be sprinkled on the leaves and stems by means of a wisp-broom or a watering pot. This will kill all the insects that come in contact with the plants. If the coal tar cannot be obtained, bellebore or Paris green may be used with perhaps equally good results. By the use of the coal tar water the plants are not in the least injured, and a supply of water may be daily added to the barrel of cold tar.
