It will be apparent to any one who will examine a solid gold watch, that aside from the necessary thickness for engraving and polishing, a large preportion of the precious metal used is needed only to stiffen and hold the engraved portions in place, and supply The surplus gold is actually needless so far as utility and beauty are consimple nature, as follows: a plate of nickle composition metal especially adapted to the purpose, has two plates of solid gold soldered one on each side. The three are then passed between polished steel rollers, and the result is astrip of heavy plated composition, from which the cases, backs, centres, bezels, etc., are cut and shaped by suitable dies and formers. The gold in these cases is sufficiently thick to admit of all kinds of chasing, engraving and enamelling; the engraved eases have been carried until worn perfectly smooth by time and use without removing the gold.
