It is quite commonly believed that in diphtheria by first giving the patient a running a man descends at each stride laxative, and when its operation has upon the ball of the foot, so that the ceased he gives cold drinks, acidalated arch of the foot may serve as a spring with pydrochloric acid and then a garto break the shock. These are the conclusions of Prof. E Wollny on the physical properties of the soil in a dense and loose state. When it is desired to increase the proportion of water in a soil density is to be aimed at, but a loose condition should be maintained when the contrary state is found needful. The more densely the particles of the soil are packed tegether the more such soil will vary in temperature.

A remarkable statement was made recently before a scientific body in Lenden-the statement given as on the authority of Mr. Veith, the well-known authority on "Coniferao"-that the cones of many of the species on the Pacific coast never open and permit the seed to escape unless opened by a forest fire, when they fall out and replenish the barned waste. "They hang on the trees for many generations -even for thirty years."

Works are projected in Vienna for obtaining a great quantity of electrical power by means of the water of Danube. The electricity is to be stored in "accumulators," of different dimensions, which would be delivered to customers for use, either for electric lighting or for motve power. Besides being thus accumulated the electricity is also to be conducted through underground wires. By combining the two methods together electrical centres will be erected in several parts of the town, from which the manufacturers, etc., will receive the required current.

After all, M. Faye maintains there is nothing very difficult about miderstanding the reis ins why comet underge sudden changes of form as they approach or recede from the son. Two causes are assigned. First, water attraction ten is to decompose besties of very small mass and great bulk when they come within its faffurnes. And comets are conceledly very light in r attent be value up er daiw nesiraques they contain. Secondly, there comes Into play the active of solar repulsion. FINE POCKET CUTLERY, which arise; from the incandescence of cometary materia when freed from great pressure and subjected to intense heat. What was relatively solid becomes nebulous. But these theories do not appear to cover the whole groun l.

From the researches of Mr. W. H. Barlow it appears that aluminum pessesses properties of a high mechanical value. A cubic inch of it weighs only .0972 pound, while its strength is about twelve tons per squire inch. It has, al-o, a large range of elasticity, the extension at the yielding point being two parts of its length. The modules E of elasticity is 10,000. S me samples two faches long gave a decility of only 2.5 per cent. Sir Henry Bussemer says that there is now invented a process o' making aluminum in a ISOM, LANNING & CO., PROPR'S. cheap form. It the cost of the manufacture of this metal should be reduced there is an doubt that to would be greatly amplitudier by makers of instruments of precision and others.
