SAN FRANCISCO, April 17 .- Miss Frances E. Willard, president of the National Woman's Christian Temper ance Union, and Miss Gorden, ber private secretary, arrived in this city pied with her duties,

It is said that prohibitory laws are well enough where there is a public sentiment to back them up ; but otherwise they are inoperative. There are a good many assumptions in that statement, and a good many things free of charge, Persons ordering a free bottle will which at best are only half true. But granted that it be altogether so, and that It is in vain to look for any good results without a public sentiment to enferce the statute ; why is there not this public sentiment? It is just simply because so many men are saying "if," and "and," and "but," and all that, when they talk about the suppression of this evil of liquor selling by law. If only every man who says, "I should be in favor of a prohibitory law if there were a public sentiment to sustain it," would just say, "I am in favor of a prohibitory law," that would make a public sentiment. There would be no division of ranks, and no doubt about the opinions and determination of the public sentiment, and they did it. Public sentiment does not make itself. Public sentiment does not move forward of itself. When there is a vigorous public sentiment on any question of morals, it is because somebody has taken an advanced position, and educated and drawn the people up to it. If all who think Plows, Harrows, and even say it would be a good thing to close liquor saloons, and to put out the fires in these distilleries and brewerles, and to stay the vast waste of strength and thought and time and money, and homes and hopes and lives, would only say without any "ifs," and "ands," and "buts," and having said it would stand by it, public sentiment on this liquor business would swell and press on like an incoming tide, and in little white there would be laws looking to the suppression of this evil which would have in them the force
