

The Democrat.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 17, 1888.

No true American will admit that an earthquake is as big as a cyclone.

To turn informer as Carey did is to be shunted like Webb through the whirlpool.

Senator Edmunds advises tourists to buy guide books and avoid every place they recommend.

New Hampshire's corn crop, if it be no better than the Senatorial crop, will consist of nibbles.

Satisfied with the improvement made after the fatal crash, the potato bugs have begun to cross the Brooklyn bridge to New York.

What with the Ohio campaign and earthquakes in Italy, there is considerable disturbance in this wicked world of ours.

Dorsey is very mad because the wicked Sun printed his confession of how he persuaded Indiana Democrats to vote the republican ticket.

A London editor says Yankee girls look a man right in the face. Poor man! They were looking to see if there were any indications of ice cream.

There is the syndicate age. And the latest is a syndicate, representing $100,000,000, to buy Cuba from Spain. It is probably a castle in Spain.

The goose that laid the golden egg was a thousand times a goose that she did not "hide her nest" and market her own produce. Moral: Never play into the hands of others.

Colonel Morrow, the Republican candidate for Governor of Kentucky, has a forlorn hope of carrying the State. We may remark that the Colonel here, but always to be, bleak.

One would suppose it to be to the interest of the voters to go and solicit the best men to become candidates for office. But it is the candidate who solicits. Therefore, the voters can not well complain if the candidate, after all his work and expense, should feel that his own interests come first. And the candidate is not likely to be the best man. The best man would see the voter in Halifax before he would ask for a vote.

The Democratic and Republican candidates for Governor appeared in public, arm in arm, at Columbus the other day. This is one of the pleasing amenities of politics, and there is no telling what it may lead to. Hoeddy and Forsaker may become so devoted each to the other that before the close of the campaign each may insist on withdrawing so as to give a clear field to the other. The prohibition candidate is understood to be "laying low" with the design of running in when the affection of the other candidates reaches its most embarrassing dimensions.

Confederate bonds are now selling by the bale.

A cigarmaker's grievances generally end in smoke.

In the matter of sleep it is often nip and tuck between tired nature and beer.

Eastern papers are predicting an early President campaign and a hot one.

Mr. Arthur's extreme availability makes him a very strong card with his party.

A young man named Hans Harrison, while crossing the Van Buren street bridge over the Chicago river Monday afternoon, broke in upon ordinary conversation by remarking, "I might as well end it here," and plunged into the river. Two hours preceding this, an unknown man leaped from the Division street bridge into the river. The bodies of both men were recovered.

It is a Chicago scientist's prediction that if pointed shoes remain in use human toes will eventually be obliterated among civilized people. Such a result would be a great blessing to persons afflicted with corns. What a time we would have in snapping our fingers at the chiropodists.

There is nothing so taking in the United States as emotion—the hysterical high-tragedy kind of impulsive frenzy that tears things to pieces. We particularly make a specialty of it in theatrical business, in suicides and in murder. Life without emotion is as dreary as a road organ's sense of fair play.

The indictment against the Republican party is briefly summarized as follows:

The Boss Shepherd Ring frisks in the District of Columbia.

The safe-burglary inquiry.

The whisky frauds, reaching to the White House.

The Freedmen's Bank grindle.

The Balkan impinchments.

The Robeson naval frauds.

The Sanborn frauds.

The Indian Bureau frauds.

The Pension Bureau frauds.

The Black Friday rascality.

The theft of the Presidency in 1876.

The Indiana bribery in 1880.

And the star-route frauds.

CIVIL SERVICE.

Much hypocritical anvilng has been indulged in about civil service reform, but two of the most important considerations connected with the whole subject have been generally overlooked. Much labor and study have been expended in getting up civil service rules under which competitive examinations for positions in the civil service are conducted. The literary qualifications are scrupulously and pedagogically determined and inquired into. But the really great and most important qualification, that of scrupulous honesty, seems to be entirely lost sight of. The experience of the last few years discloses the fact that public faith and official integrity are at a distressingly low ebb, and as a necessary consequence, defalcations, and official corruption are as commonplace as matter of course things.

No public officer will be a credit to the State unless his integrity, like Caesar's wife, is above suspicion. It matters not what care and labor may be bestowed in getting complete and thorough knowledge of the literary attainments of applicants for places in the civil service, and the appointment of those only who have full literary requirements for the places sought after, yet if these applicants be not honest and faithful in the discharge of public duties then indeed will such public servants be a drawback and detriment to the public service. True, there is no certain way of determining whether an applicant be honest or not, but the number of those who gain admission into the public service and prove unfaithful might be very materially lessened if severe and bitter punishment were more universally meted out to them. The press of the country have a great duty to perform in educating the public mind up to a higher standard of official integrity. The defaulter and unfaithful public official should be held up to public scorn and public contempt.

Another matter much overlooked is the great number of sine cure offices created for the certain purpose of rewarding party hacks for dirty partisan work. Hundreds of these offices are of no earthly use to any one except to him who fills it. The incumbents draw liberal salaries and perform no service. Here is as great an opportunity for a genuine reformation as can be found, and yet the great reformers such as Eaton, Curtis and others are silent upon this subject. Let us have all these useless and corrupt appendages of a corrupt Republican administration lopped off and the result will be bona fide civil service reform.

REPUBLICAN CURIOSITIES.

An interesting volume says the New York World might be written on the curiosities of politics—especially of Republican politics.

It is curious that the Garfield Republicans, so powerful and rampant less than a year ago, should now be as dead as their martyr President. The gentle breath of patronage has blown them out of existence.

It is curious that William E. Chandler, the chum of James G. Blaine, should be in President Arthur's Cabinet, with certis blanchis to run the political machinery of the Administration after his own fashion.

It is curious that Blaine should have retired suddenly from politics to occupy himself with writing a book.

It is curious to find Blaine's personal organ announcing by authority the plumed knight's retirement from the Presidential contest of 1884, and declaring that "since President Arthur gave up the leadership of a faction he has steadily grown and is very much stronger than he was."

It is curious to see Roscoe Conkling looking with disdain on politics and with coldness on an administration with Chester A. Arthur at its head!

It is curious to see Collector Robertson, whose appointment to the Custom-house was made in insulting defiance of the stalwarts, retaining his position with the consent and approval of the same President Arthur who did everything in his power to prevent the appointment.

It is curious to witness a reconstruction of the New York Republican machine under Johnny O'Brien, with the editor of the Tribune as his first lieutenant.

How can these curiosities of politics be explained? Is the answer to the conundrum, Chester A. Arthur for 1884?

RESERVED RIGHTS.

It is said, says the San Francisco Examiner, that Judge Fparker, the Republican candidate for Governor of Ohio, declared in a recent public address that "a man who talks about the reserved rights of the States is one whom no soldier can listen to."

The reverse of this proposition might be put in this way: The man who ignores or denies the reserved rights of the States is too big a fool or too great a fanatic to be entrusted with office.

The zeal of which Judge Forsaker is such a national advocate has no real existence outside of the concession of the States. The Federal Government does not exercise its power as a distinct nationality, but as a creation of the States, which expressly declared that the powers not conceded to the General Government "are reserved to the States, respectively, and to the people." This being a Constitutional declaration, is supposed to be accepted as a self-evident proposition by all citizens except Republicans, who, like Judge Forsaker, have extremely advanced ideas upon the question of Federal nationality. It is not improbable, however, that the Ohio candidate confused the old State Rights doctrine of the Secessionists with the reserved rights of the States. There is a broad distinction between them. "State Rights," or its logical corollary, Secession, was settled by the war. The sword declared it to be an impracticable political principle. But the reserved rights of the States cannot be destroyed until the Constitution is annulled. There are, however, a great many Republicans—and perhaps Judge Forsaker is one of them—who think that the Republican party is much higher than the Constitution. These people spell nation with a big N and believe in centralization of power and authority. The logical drift of such opinions is to monarchy, more or less absolute. Happily, however, the great body of the people cling to the form of government as the Constitution made it. They declare for a strict construction of that instrument and deny to President or Congress the exercise of doubtful powers. As long as the Democratic party exists those who hold to these views will have an exponent of their principles; and among the most conspicuous and cherished of these are the reserved rights of the States.

Last Friday as a party of young ladies and gentlemen were visiting the falls on Swift creek, three miles above the Lower house, they discovered the body of E. H. Foster, an English artist of some note, 40 years of age. Foster was financially embarrassed, and was indebted to the landlord of the Lower house, who took his picture for security he not being able to liquidate his claim. It is supposed that he went to a high cliff above the falls, took poison and then precipitated himself over the edge into the water below. He was last seen alive two weeks ago last Monday.

Saturday evening, at about 7 o'clock, the large warehouse at the depot, at Forest Grove, belonging to Hon. A. Hinman, was discovered to be on fire. The flames spread so fast that all efforts to save any portion of the building were useless. The building and machinery cost $9200, and were insured in the Phoenix and Home for $2000. Six cars belonging to the O. & C. R. R. Co. were lying on the side-track by the warehouse and were all burned. It is thought that the loss will include only the wood work of the cars. The origin of the fire is unknown. Mr. Hinman informs your correspondent that he will not rebuild this season.

It is said that the proposed railroad from Red Bluff, Cal., to Oregon, via Modoc county, is only a paper road, and that the California and Oregon Land Company, which owns the lands east of the mountains secured by the Oregon Military Road Company, is at the bottom of the scheme.

The Paris correspondent of the Morning Post understands the attention of the United States minister at London has been called to the fact that America is furnishing China with arms and ammunition, which, it is believed, are destined for Tonquin. The correspondent adds that the American legation refused to answer a question in regard to the subject.

A compromise having been effected between the Southern Pacific and the California Southern railroad, the crossing was put in Sunday afternoon, the first opposition track that ever crossed the Southern Pacific railroad. A large number of citizens were present and made joyful demonstrations.

D. O. Mills, formal presentation to the capital commissioners for the state of California of a magnificent piece of statuary, representing Columbus at the court of Queen Isabella, nine feet high, which cost $35,000, has been accepted, and will be placed in a few days in the rotunda of the capital, at Mills' expense.

A terrible rain and hail storm swept through Iowa, near Council Bluffs, Monday. It was about two miles wide, beating corn and all growing vegetation into the ground. It is regarded as one of the most severe storms that ever visited western Iowa. Several lives are reported as having been lost.

Wednesday evening John Fisher, aged 18, was sailing with two young ladies at Quincy, Massachusetts, when a gale of wind struck the sails, and the boom swinging suddenly around, Fisher and one of the ladies, named Winifred Butler, were swept into the water. Fisher was immediately drowned, and Miss Butler died soon after being brought on shore.

Explorers recently discovered a cave at the base of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., the opening being at low-water mark in the Tennessee river, three miles from the city. Explorations developed a wonderful cave of unknown depth. At the extreme point a very large lake was encountered, into which a fall 150 feet high poured its water with a noise of thunder. Other waterfalls and other interesting phenomena were discovered.

A sheepherder, named Rutherford, in Silver Peak district, White Pine county, Cal., was shot and killed last week by Indians, whom he and a man called Doc. Clay undertook to drive off a little patch of ground they were cultivating. Rutherford is thought to have been innocent in accompanying Clay. The Indians threaten that they will kill Clay. The neighbors say that the violence was unprovoked, and if Clay is killed it will serve him right.

A Herald reporter asked Sullivan "What are your plans now?" "Oh, I shall remain here three months or so, and make things lively, then I shall probably make off to California with a manager and make exhibitions." Later he was waited on by delegates of the striking operators, and asked to be umpire for a baseball match between the telegraphers and printers Thursday afternoon, the proceeds to go to the strikers' fund. Sullivan consented, expressing his admiration of the pluck of the operators in holding out as they did.

GOINGVILLE, OR., Aug. 18th, '88.

Eds. Democrat:

Our little burg has been lately established, the boundaries have not been permanently settled, nor has application been made for its incorporation, but the names of prominent citizens have been mentioned for the offices of Mayor, Marshal, etc.

The Hotel is a stupendous structure, covering about half an acre, the kitchen comprising all four doors. The dining room walls are hung with evergreens and fir poles, its ceiling is beautifully frescoed with knot holes and large seasonal cracks in the twelve inch boards, and the sleeping apartments are divided off into one large room furnished with a substitute for black walnut. The immensities of the beds are being composed of hanel poles, finely turned and polished (by nature).

There are several fine residences on our Main Street.

Adjoining the Hotel is the residence of E. J. Goin, after whom this celebrated burg is named. It is a fine white edifice mark, No. 1 Ducking, and his kitchen embraces the entire shadow of a large fir tree.

Across Main street may be seen the structure of Egle, Hudson & Co., and from the upper story may be seen the sign "Furnished Rooms to Let." The lower story is a large hall, which is used for public entertainments.

Our people were visited last Friday evening by a troupe known as the "Link Combination," and were well pleased with lofty tumbling of Link himself, and the rendering of "Home Sweet Home" by the Filos and the fine order kept by Hudson, the master of ceremonies.

We have been visited by a missionary from foreign lands, who spoke to us for our souls good and also assisted our little colony by bringing with him some emigrants who settled among us.

J. J. Dorris, the owner and proprietor of our Hotel, furnishes the best of the market affords. He is also superintending the repairs on the South Fork bridge on the road leading from Soio to Albany. The work is progressing finely, and judging from appearances the repairs will be substantial, and when completed will be a good protection to the foundation of said bridge.

BROWNSVILLE ITEMS.

Brownsville, Or., Aug. 14, 1888.

Eds. Democrat:

Mrs. C. E. Stanard is visiting at Philomath in Benton county.

R. H. Coshow and family have gone to Upper Soda Springs to rusticate a couple of weeks.

James Smith and family, and W. I. Coshow, started this morning on their return trip to their homes in the Ochooco county.

Jas. Coshow and his young wife also left this morning for Washington Territory, where they go to locate and begin the battle of life. Success attend you, "Jim my boy."

John Wilbur went to Albany Sunday with one of John Wilson's teams, and on his way home, just before reaching Brownsville, he upset the loggy and smashed things up pretty badly. Miss Mollie McCully, who was in the buggy with him made a most miraculous escape in not getting hurt at all. The principal damage was done to the buggy, which had the bed entirely torn from the running gears and the top all smashed up. The team ran with the running gears and made for their stable, which being open, they ran into and were captured.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Moyer returned on Saturday from their trip to the Mountains, both much benefitted.

The smiling countenance of O. V. Gerzabek could be seen on our streets yesterday.

Crops are turning out much better than was expected. Fields of grain that lay not just enough rain on them since they were sown, even to lay the dust on the ground, are turning out very good average crops. Verily, Oregon is a "country of wonders. Harvesting is now progressing finely.

Dick Stephens, living near this place, died on yesterday.

Mrs. Edith Smith, Misses Libbie and Sarah Kay and Miss Lena Galbraith, returned Sunday from a weeks' sojourn at Waterloo.

Ted Coshow has closed his school, and is now stopping in Coshow & Snyder's store.

Prof. J. B. Horner and lady have again gone to Benton county.

Rev. McFarland, of the M. E. Church south, preached Sunday and Monday evenings in the Methodist church.

SHOT HIMSELF.

Saturday afternoon John Handrick of Reoster block, while out hunting in that vicinity for grouse, accidentally shot himself in the right foot severely mutilating one of the toes. At the time of the accident he was going through some brush, and carried his gun, a fowling-piece, in his hand with the muzzle pointing down. The hammer catching upon a limb, set the charge which carried away one of his toes. He came to the city on the same afternoon, and took up his quarters at the St. Vincent's Hospital where his wound was dressed. Fortunately as he was in losing but a toe, the injury proves a painful one, and fears are entertained that erysipelas may supervene, and give to it a more serious termination.—Telegram.
