BY L. B, L.

Now, tis Fall ! but bright and lovely, As the Spring, of other climes; Hark ! the meadow lark is calling,

Down among the grand old pines.

On the hills, the woods are humming.

Some to brown, and some to gold :

When the mosnlights o'er them falling, Such a splendor lies unteld. Hear the song birds softly trilling. From their home among the boughs ;

All is peace, and calm, and pleasant, In this proud, old State of ours, Resting by the grand old ocean,

Free from war and free from strife : Here no Redman lurks in ambush, Seeking for the settlers life. Here the tempest never rages, Scarce e'er is heard the thunders roar ;

But instead's the smiling sunshine, On this grand Pacific shore, Bock Hill Items.
