WASHINGTON LETTER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22nd, 1886. Our law-makers on Capitol Hill have had before them this week much miscellaneous matter and many minor measures. It would be less difficult to state what questions were not touched upon by them than to mention those that have been discussed. In the Senate silver has been the chief subject of debate, but in the House, there has population, been a little of almost everything.

Commissioner Sparks of the Land Office holds the awful tenor of his way against the land theives out West. He has never been in the least perturbed by the threats of assassination he has received from persons to whom he has refused land patents. There is probably more indignation against him is Dakota than in any other locality. The Commissioner has just expressed his inflexibility in a letter sent to that Territory. He said, "I do not propose to confirm fraudulent entries, and I do propose to find out those which are honest and to separate them from those which are found to be otherwise."
