Washington

From our regular correspondent.

WASHINGTON, April 23rd, 1886. Such distinguished witnesses on the stand as the Attorney General, Jay Gould and Grand Master Workman Powderly, the first in connection with the Pan Electric, and the two latter with the strike investigation, have made these proceedings particularly interesting.

The announcement that Mr. Garland would testify before the Telephone Committee of Inquiry, drew an unusually large crowd to the cryptic room away down under the Capitol. He made his appearance looking pale and feeble from his recent sickness, and after a courteous salute to the committee, dropped into the witness chair, in his careless languid way, and proceeded to give a clear, simple and unreserved statement of the Telephone affair. He had nothing to conceal and was anxious to tell all he knew. He said the Pan Electric scheme was simply an organization of several impetuous gentlemen who wanted to better their condition. He was willing to go into it if it offered any inducements.

Attorney General Garland in the course of his statement, told the committee that he had never, in any way, used his official position to advance the interest of the Pan Electric Telephone Company, that he would as soon thought of jumping into the Potomac with a mill stone about his neck as to have done so. He had never made a penny out of Pan Electric, but on the contrary, was $400 out on the account, and he declared positively that he had no connection whatever with the bringing of the Government suit, and that his stock was not a gift.

During the examination of Mr. Humphreys, who is counsel for the Globe Telephone Company, and in politics an Ohio Republican, this gentleman stated that Mr. Garland positively refused to talk to him on the subject of instituting a Government suit. "He convinced me," said the witness, "that he was incorruptible." "Did you try to corrupt him?" inquired Congressman Ransley, of Mass. "I did not," responded the witness, "but I may have had a suspicion regarding the reform pretensions of the Democratic Administration." "You think better of it now?" asked Chairman Bayle. "I found that some Democrats were honest" replied Mr. Humphrey, "and I think if two honest men live, they are Mr. Garland and Secretary Lamar."

The room in which the strike investigation is being conducted was so overcrowded during the examination of Mr. Powderly and others that only members of Congress and newspaper correspondents were admitted during the examination of the great railroad magnate, Jay Gould. Mr. Powderly was very much gazed at, and does not look in the least like a son of toil. He is refined and elegant looking, and wears a long moustache and spectacles.

When asked to tell the whole story of the strike, he replied that he preferred to answer specific questions. During the course of his examination he said that the labor organization was perfectly peaceful. Sometimes its own members misunderstood the organization. It was sometimes impossible to control a man by any law when he had been wronged. One point Mr. Powderly said he wanted perfectly understood. It was that if any of the Knights had violated the law, the organization would help to punish them. The law of the land was supreme above the laws of organizations. He became impassioned on this subject and declared that all violators, whether Knights of Labor or Capitalists, should be punished. The millionaire violator should suffer the same as the poor man. "I have made this statement before," said Mr. Powderly, "and people have seen fit to see in it an invitation to anarchy. If that is anarchy, in the name of God, what is law?"

It is an open question whether the Senate or the House has been more commendably employed this week. The letter has not done much at anything, and the Senate has done little but vote away the people's money. On one day it passed between four and five hundred private pension bills. This is the largest number of bills ever passed in one day by either house of Congress since the establishment of the Government. The first thing the Senate did this week was to vote $200,000 for the erection of a fire proof hall of records in this city, and Senator Hoar provoked a Senatorial laugh by asking if the proposed building "was for the keeping of the President's private papers?"

ODDS AND ENDS.

Fowlerville, Mich., has fifty widows and three widowers. One of London's swell clubs, the Empire, has collapsed, with $40,000 in debt. In a price list of autographs appears the entry: "Hayes, Rutherford B., 35c."

Icebergs have been seen off the Labrador coast two miles long and 300 feet high. Weston, Wood county, claims to make more sourkraut than any other town in Ohio.

Springfield, Mass., proposes to turn one of its effete roller skating rinks into an armory. An American church for Christian workshippers of all denominations is to be built at Niles.

The territory now owned by the German East African Society measures about 30,000 German square miles. The receipts of the San Francisco post office for the year ending March 31st, 1886, amount to $501,093.16.

Stone quarries on the estate of Mr. Parrell have been opened, and material is being taken from them for paving streets in Dublin. Bleeding Kansas may bleed again. There is a movement to cut the state in two so that a state may be made out of the western end.

It is estimated that there are more than one hundred clubs in New York city, and that their total membership comprise from 60,000 to 80,000. The Hudson, N. Y., Gazette is 102 years old, and claims to have never swerved from Democratic principles since that party was founded.

The French ministry of war has issued the beard controversy by issuing a preceptory order for all soldiers and officers to raise beards immediately. A circus at Los Angeles, in order to avoid the $1,000 license imposed by the city authorities, excluded from its program equestrian performances.

The Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York city, rents for $185,000 a year. The lowest get back about $60,000 of this from strokekeepers who have leases on the premises. The 33,241 names on the registry lists out of a possible 35,000 showed the interest of the voters of Minneapolis, Minn., took in the recent municipal election of that city.

A Philadelphia preacher went down into a well to recover the church Bible, and was overcome by the foul air at the bottom that he was resuscitated with difficulty. Banker Hill monument is 291 feet high, built of solid granite, and every day it oscillates and fro, as the heat of the sun expands the eastern or the western side.

Canvas-back ducks have been hard to secure on Chesapeake Bay the past winter, owing to the legal prohibition against big long guns, and have been steady at four dollars per pair in the Eastern market. Over 2,000 women are compositors in Paris, and are giving the male printers a good deal of trouble because of low-priced labor. Book work is going to Paris from the provinces on this account.

The St. Louis morgue is free to all comers, and school children are in the habit of going into that horrible place to gaze upon the ghastly objects exposed to general view for identification. An Illinois editor defines a philanthropist as a zealous person bent on doing the greatest possible good to the greatest possible number with the greatest possible amount of other people's money.

A new city water company has been organized in Los Angeles with a capital stock of $250,000. Its plan of operation is to procure a supply from several large artesian wells that have recently been bored. Willie Bradford, five years old, strayed away from his home in the Cherokee Nation the other day, and the next day the wolves had left of the poor little fellow was found in a mountain glen.

A marine governor has been patented which consists of a float hung over the stern and connected with the steam valve by a chain. When the stern of the vessel pitches high out of the water the float falls and closes the valve. The frogs on the "State" Railroad through Western Massachusetts are being filled with wood in order to prevent accidents like that which happened lately, where, by catching his foot in a frog, a brakeman was run over before he could get loose.

In a late lecture at Yale Professor Arthur T. Hadley stated that no less than 15,000 persons were injured annually in the United States from the single duty of coupling cars. This estimate is made from statistics of surgical aid given to such cases.

An Alabama cotton gin manufacturer has just shipped ten of the most improved machines to Russia. They are consigned to Moscow, and it is thought that the Russian government wants them to experiment in cotton culture in the Black Sea provinces.

TEMPERANCE DEPARTMENT.

EDITED BY THE Women's Christian Temperance Union

OUR HONORARY "Ys."

ALGEMON G. BUTLER, Member of the first Y. W. C. T. U. of Philadelphia, Pa.

"To this end was the son of God manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil." I used to say if there were any works of the devil on the earth the liquor traffic was one of them. But I have changed my mind. I do not think that the liquor business is a work of the devil. Let us see. Who enacted the license law? We answer the legislature. Well, who composes the legislature? We answer again, representatives from the different districts of the state. Who sends these legislators to the legislature? Why, the people of the state by their votes. Now what has the devil to do in bringing the liquor business into existence? No, we, the people, planted this tree by our votes and have been nourishing it with our votes, for these many years, and the very best thing we as voters can do is to hew down this tree of our own planting which has produced so much evil. No Christian can afford to take any less radical position in relation to any evil than our Saviour took.

When He was upon earth He said, "The ax is laid at the root of the tree, therefore every tree which bringeth forth not good fruit is hewn down and cast into the fire." This, verily, you will notice, does not say trim off a few of the branches, as high license would do, and leave the trunk of the tree; but first go to the root of the evil—cut down, and then cast into the fire. Is not this radical and absolute prohibition. Then let every vote be an ax, and every voter a chopper, and let us chop away at this tree until it is absolutely destroyed. All we need is willing hands, and God will accompany them with a divine and omnipotent blessing.

When Moses came to the Red Sea with the children of Israel, you will remember God told him to take his rod in his hand and stretch his hand over the sea. This was all He told him to do. He walks down to the sea and carries out the command. What was the result? The waters began to pile up on one side and ran away on the other. Three things were accomplished; he saved himself, saved his nation, and drowned every last one of his enemies. The one thing needful is willing hands, and then the tree must die.

The Washington Sentinel, edited by the attorney of the United States Brewers' Association, notes the fact that the "Liquor-Traffic Commission bill," the work of the prohibitionists, has passed the Senate, and so has the Temperance School-Book bill, and adds: "It will be of the greatest interest to all the true friends of liberty in the House to have the eyes you voted called when these bills come up for a final vote. That vote will be of importance to the candidates for re-election." This political threat which the brewers' attorney has used effectively hitherto is fast losing its power. It is a two-edged sword which can be used quite as effectively by the opponents of the liquor traffic. In most districts a vote for the Commission of Inquiry will now rather help than hinder the return of such members of Congress as may wish to be re-nominated.

In the late ominous riots in St. Louis it is said that sundry drunken men were conspicuously seen and did much to aggravate the disturbance. The labor troubles of the country are now so widespread as to give more than usual significance to the loss of life and the destruction of property at St. Louis—serious enough at any time. With sobriety and consequent self-control, difficult to regulate as may be the difference between the employed and their employers, there are some which may not be harmoniously adjusted, without violence, by arbitration. But alcohol is inflammatory, and inflames those who use it for dissipation and thought and action. The drinking saloon is a most important and dangerous factor of the labor problem. It wastes the wages of workmen, and robs their families of what, properly husbanded, would insure in most cases at least immunity from the worst forms of pinching poverty and want. In the interest of both the employed and the employers, of peace and good order, the drinking saloon ought everywhere to be promptly and permanently suppressed.

The Toronto Globe sent two commissioners to Maine, to report on the prohibition law. One was a prohibitionist, the other a pronounced anti-prohibitionist, but both pronounced that the law was a success.
