A Little Sufferer

Cleaned, Purified, and Beautified by the Cuticura Remedies.

It affords me pleasure to give you this report of the cure of my little girl by your Cuticura Remedies. When six months old her left hand began to swell and had every appearance of a large tumor. We consulted a doctor, but to no purpose. About five months afterward it became more and more inflamed. We then tried a course of medicine, but with no other result. At last, when I understood the name of your Cuticura Remedies, I immediately commenced using them. The result was that in twenty-two days the tumor had disappeared, and my little girl was as healthy as ever. I am now at the age of six years, a strong and healthy child. The Cuticura Remedies are sold everywhere. Price, Cuticura, the great skin cure, 50 cts.; Cuticura Soap, an exquisite beautifier, 25 cts.; Cuticura Resolvent, the New Blood Purifier, 50 cts. Washington.

(From our regular correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, March 18th, 1887. Pedagogues, railroad men and excursionists have had possession of the city during the week. The National Department of superintendence, the Passenger Agents Association of the United States and Canada, and the Institute of Civics have each held conventions here, while the excursionists have come by the thousand. The President's social duties have not in the least diminished with the adjournment of Congress. He accorded the railroad representatives a special reception on one of his off days, and yesterday afternoon when he dropped his pen and papers and came down to the East Room at his regular hour for shaking hands with the great American public, he found the crowd swelled by the presence of several hundred of the educational dignitaries now in the city, and the cultured gentlemen who represent the American Institute of Civics.

The latter society has for its object the promotion of the study of government and the spread of Mr. Dorman B. Eaton's political philosophy.

At the President smiled graciously and shook hands with the superintendents, he assured them that he was always delighted to meet a body of school teachers. "I was something of a school teacher once myself, you know," said he, "and I sometimes feel that I am something of a school teacher still." Every school man in the line was presented to the President by name. "Dr. Lucky, of Pittsburg," said the introducer, as an unusually handsome gentleman stepped forward to grasp the Presidential hand. It had been intended to have all the educators in one compact body with no outsiders sandwiched between them, but it happened that a very dissipated looking old tramp had gotten into line just behind the fine looking man from Pittsburg. As the straggler approached the President there was a marked hiatus. No tongue can tell his name. But the President was equal to the situation. He extended his hand with unusual cordiality and said in an encouraging tone: "How are you my friend? I suppose your name must be Dr. Un-lucky." Every body in hearing of the remark laughed and so did the tramp. He then left the President's house. The pedagogues were photographed in a group on the steps of the State, War and Navy Department building.

At one of the Mr. Cleveland's recent noon-day receptions there appeared at the end of the procession a sharp looking man with a short, clean-shaven face and close-cut white hair, who proved to be Mr. Edwin Smith, one of the lawyers who defrauded James D. Fish when he was on trial in connection with the ruin of the Marine National Bank. Mr. Smith is working hard to have the President pardon the old banker, and thinks he will succeed. The ground on which he pleads for mercy is that the old man has now been punished as much as it is possible to punish him, and that it would be in mercy to his family to have him released. He says the old man's daughter has taken a room in Auburn and means the penitentiary like a spectator day and night.

At the educational convention the superintendents have discussed civil service reform. Those who spoke on the subject were pretty nearly all civil service reformers, and that sentiment was loudly applauded by the assemblage of men and women who filled the hall of the National Museum where the sessions were held.

This reminds me of something that Representative Breckenridge, of Kentucky, recently said on the subject. He was speaking before the Virginia Democratic Association about the duties of Democrats to their party. The potency of Democracy in the District of Columbia is fully demonstrated, by the way, in the size and enthusiasm of the meetings of the different Democratic Associations which are held from time to time. The Congressman from Kentucky said that a Democratic administration, in the first year or two of its accession to power, could not fulfill all the hopes and expectations and anticipations of that event. It was enough that it had given the country an honest and an able Government and fully represented the public opinion that produced it. Instead of complaining of the Civil Service laws and the fact that the Republicans are not turned out of office as fast as they might, he said it was the duty of Democrats to endeavor to make Democratic supremacy permanent, and when this was accomplished, more of their hopes might be realized.

Experience in a Glasgow hospital has taught Dr. J. S. Neime that boiled or fried fish is a dangerous diet for weak persons, but that steamed fish is harmless.

AN ANCIENT NOSE-PULLING AFFAIR

Mr. Adams' private secretary was his son, John Adams, who soon made himself very obnoxious to the friends of General Jackson. One evening Mr. Russell Jarvis, who then edited the Washington Telegraph, a newspaper which advocated Jackson's election, attended a "dining-room" at the White House, escorting his wife and a party of visiting relatives from Boston. Mr. Jarvis introduced those who were with him to Mrs. Adams, who received them courteously, and they then passed on into the East Room. Soon afterward they found themselves standing opposite to Mr. John Adams, who was conversing with the Rev. Mr. Stetson. "Who is that lady?" asked Mr. Stetson. "That," replied Mr. John Adams, in a tone as loud as that the party heard it, "is the wife of one Russell Jarvis, and if he knew how contemptible he is viewed in this house they would not be here." The Bostonians at once paid their respects to Mrs. Adams and withdrew. Mr. Jarvis having first ascertained from Mr. Stetson that it was Mr. John Adams who had insulted them. A few days afterward Mr. Jarvis sent a note to Mr. John Adams, demanding an explanation, by a friend of his, Mr. McLean. Mr. Adams told Mr. McLean that he had no apology to make to Mr. Jarvis, and that he wished no correspondence with him.

A week later Mr. John Adams went to the Capitol to deliver messages from the President to each house of Congress. Having delivered that addressed to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, he was going through the rotunda toward the Senate Chamber, when he was overtaken by Mr. Jarvis, who pulled his nose and slapped his face. A scuffle ensued, but they were quickly parted by Mr. Dancy, a Representative from Maryland. President Adams notified Congress in a special message of the occurrence, and the House appointed a select committee of investigation. Witnesses were examined and elaborate reports were drawn up, but neither the majority nor the minority recommended that any punishment be inflicted upon Mr. Jarvis. From "Paley's Reminiscences of Sixty Years in the National Metropolis."

It is an interesting fact, says Bradstreet, that though there is a prohibitory law in Maine, the United States Government derives a share of its revenue from the liquor dealers of the state. The fact has not escaped the attention of the Maine legislators, as is shown by the provision in the liquor law just passed making the payment of a United States tax prima facie evidence of the illegal sale of liquor for the reason that a druggist is not required to pay that tax for using liquors in compounding bona fide medicines. The new law makes the penalty on the first conviction for a violation of the act thirty days imprisonment, as well as a fine, and prohibits the sale of either for tipping purposes. While Maine is making its prohibitory legislation more stringent, the advocates of saloon restriction in New York are pressing the High License bill in the legislature. The bill has now been passed to a third reading in the Assembly, and the prospect of its passage in both houses is thought to be good. The experience under the act, in case it should become a law, will, without doubt, present regards of exceptional value, especially as regards the administration of laws restricting the liquor traffic in large cities.

POPULAR SCIENCE. A proper safe working load for wire rope is as follows: One-half inch in diameter, 1000 pounds; five-eighths rope, 1500 pounds; three-fourths rope, 3500 pounds; one-inch rope, 6000 pounds. This is for nineteen wires to the strand, hemp centres.

An artisan well being sunk at White Plains, Nev., is down over 2300 feet, and can go no further until the water, which is seventeen per cent salt and so heavy that the ropes and tools float on it and the drill does not penetrate the rock, has been shut out.

It would appear that gas will furnish more light when employed to drive an electric motor than when used directly as an illuminant. In a paper read before one of the London engineering societies it was mentioned, as the result of many investigations, that 1000 feet of gas used to produce incandescent electric lighting by means of a gas engine will give twice as much light as if employed as an illuminant in the ordinary way.

While agreeing in general with the theory that comets have their origin beyond the limits of the solar system, Prof. Daniel Kirkwood finds proof that some of those of short period are minor planets, whose orbits in the asteroid zone have been changed through the perturbing influence of the large planets. The third comet of 1884, for instance, seems to have been drawn from the asteroids by Jupiter in Mar. 1875.

HIGH UNITED STATES SENATORS.

Randall L. Gibson of Louisiana places his fortune at $1,400,000. Francis B. Stockbridge of Michigan is not believed to be worth much over $1,000,000.

Thomas M. Bowen of Colorado has a fortune of $3,000,000, which was made in silver mining.

John R. McPherson of New Jersey, who inherited his wealth, is worth about $1,200,000.

Thomas W. Palmer of Michigan writes his wealth with six eiphers and a figure-four in front of them. Eugene Hall of Maine, who is credited with a fortune of $1,700,000, may think his wife for most of it.

Don Cameron of Pennsylvania is comfortably off with $5,000,000 nest egg.

William N. Stewart of Nevada is another silver king. His wealth is estimated at $1,500,000, but some say it is more.

John Sherman of Ohio has put by $2,000,000, which it is popularly believed he has saved out of his salary as United States Senator.

James B. Eastly of Louisiana, who represents one of the old Southern families, has about $1,100,000 in real estate and railroad stocks.

John P. Jones of Nevada, who used to reckon his wealth with eight figures, is now placed near the foot of the millionaire list, with $1,250,000 to his credit.

Joseph E. Brown of Georgia is one of the few Southern Senators who can be reckoned as a millionaire, or anywhere near it. He is worth about $12,000,000.

Henry B. Payne of Ohio, it is said, thanks to the Standard Oil Company, can draw his check for $14,000,000, and still have a comfortable sum left over.

Philetus Sawyer, the Wisconsin lumber-man, has laid by a snug little sum somewhere between two and three millions, and doesn't have to depend on his salary.

George Hearst, the junior Senator from California, is careless in money matters, but has managed to scoop together about $10,000,000, which his son is helping him to spend.

Leland Stanford of California is so rich that he cannot count his dollars, but a rough estimate places his pile in the neighborhood of $50,000,000. He is the richest man in the Senate.

Charles B. Farwell, who made his money in the dry goods business, was put down at $5,000,000 during his canvass for the Senatorship, but now he has a good deal of difficulty in squeezing into the list of millionaires.

Ruhl, a mountain village of Thuringia, is the center of the pipe manufacture of Germany. Like Sheffield, it is famous in the middle ages for its arms and armor, and at a subsequent period its attention to iron smoking pipes.

Gradually, however, beginning in the seventeenth century, mesochrom and wood were adopted as more suitable materials to work upon. The first mesochrom pipe was carved in the early part of the Thirty Years' War, and Wallenstein is said to have bought it. The true play is to be procured only at Eski-Scher in Asia Minor, where there are large deposits, and whence it is sent direct to the manufacturers at Ruhl, of which there are at present forty, employing almost the whole population of the district.

The number of pipes and other articles dear to smokers turned out is enormous, the yearly average being 540,000 real mesochroms, varying in price from 3d. to £12 apiece; 500,000 imitation mesochroms at from 1s. to 2s. 1d. each; 9,000,000 porcelain pipe bowls, either plain white or gaily painted, ranging in price from 4d. to 10s. 6d. each; 5,000,000 wooden pipes of infinite variety in size, form, ornamentation and price, the common kinds being extremely cheap and those artistically carved fetching a comparatively high price; 3,000,000 bowls of clay of lava, plain or dozed, of better kinds at 3s. the dozen; 15,000,000 pipes composed of separate parts, (bowl, stick, cover, etc.) from 5d. to £25 the dozen.

There are five qualities of mesochrom used in the making of pipes; the best is known by its facile absorption of the nicotine juice of tobacco, which gradually develops into a rich brown bloom upon the surface, and when this process is well advanced the pipe becomes almost invulnerable without being hard. A specimen of this kind sold at Vienna for £50, although it was not very highly prized.

A novel advertising scheme was recently introduced by a merchant in Carthage, Ill. A series of prodigious boot tracers were painted leading from each side of the public square to his establishment. The scheme, it is said, was led to perfection, for everybody seemed anxious to follow the tracks to their destination.

TEMPERANCE DEPARTMENT.

EDITED BY THE Women's Christian Temperance Union

ON TO VICTORY. BY R. L. DRUCE (Air "John Brown.")

The eastern skies are glowing with the sunrise just at hand; The Prohibition legions full of faith and courage grand Rally to the glorious war-cry, "God, and home and native land!" And sweep to victory on.

CHORUS: Glory, glory, hallelujah! Glory, glory, hallelujah! And sweep to victory on. Mecca from our Eastern border sends the first inspiring shout, And Western boys are putting ruin's infernal hosts to rout, While Texas to Iowa flings the temperance banner on, And sweeps to victory on.

CHORUS: From East and West, from North and South, three hundred thousand strong, The ranks of Prohibition march resolutely along; Jehovah calls and all the host respond with shout and song, And sweep to victory on.

CHORUS: The ranks of ruin and ruin at the sound in terror quail; They fly before our legions like the leaves before the gale. God omnipotent still reigneth, and his name we shall proclaim, And sweep to victory on.

CHORUS: One of the greatest questions before the public today, is the labor question. Great is the cry which goes up, that "capital oppresses labor." Now every thoughtful minded person, will have to acknowledge that capital and labor are indispensable to each other, capital without labor would be useless, would it not be wise to look candidly at the problem, and see what are the "prime factors." Giving due attention to the subject, we find the greatest foe the laboring man has, is the liquor traffic and its attendant evils.

Each year in the United States, 70,000,000 bushels of grain are consumed in distilleries and breweries; enough if ground into flour, to make 4,200,000,000, pound loaves of bread. This wastefulness is doubly destructive; because it makes grain dearer on account of greater scarcity, and it also furnishes a fascinating poison to draw the money from the pocket of the poor man.

How is it that so many farmers are mortgaged? The use of intoxicating drink has mortgaged many a homestead. You say prohibition of the liquor traffic won't prohibit. Why is it that in Prohibition towns, the word comes to us: "No saloons. No prisons, (because, we have no use for any.) No streets. No paupers."

I here affirm that, if there were no liquor sold, sold or drunk, there would be no body out of work, or starving. If the $900,000,000 spent annually for drink could be expended for that which is food, for that which is clothing, etc., how many heart's stones would be made away? How many four barrels would be filled? How many a barefoot boy could have nice warm shoes? Reflect ye voters! It is for you to say whether this change shall be made in our Nation's program. Shall the $900,000,000 go to the saloons or to the merchants, the butchers, the bakers? That all powerful ballot alone can decide this question. It is time the laborers become roused enough to perpetually boycott the drinking halls of Oregon. Gambling halls, drinking halls. Are they not rightly named?

Let all the people rise and shout, "Millions for homes, factories, schools, not one cent for these infamous dens of iniquity. Aye! The saloon must go!" L. H. A.

Mrs. Willard writes from Berlin: "We have just organized a Ladies' Christian in the American chapel, for Christian work, and are all very much engaged in it. I trust some temperance work will grow out of it and that soon we may have a German W. C. T. U., though you must not expect much. Things go so slowly here. A year ago we could not even have organized the Americans—and the pastor himself would not have been very friendly to temperance work. Recently he gave a magnificent sermon on temperance, and talked subject to the young men on the same subject in the evening. I spoke the same evening in the German Methodist Church to a Total Abstinence Society of sixty men and women and told them of our work, and the faces of the women were very bright as I told them how we wanted them to join with us in the World's W. C. T. U."

"The Germans are not as easily led as our people, and are not carried away by enthusiasm or magnetism as we are; but one can win them by gentleness and kindness and not too progressive movements."

HOW REGARDED BY A PROMINENT PHYSICIAN. "No other remedy within my knowledge can fill its place. I have been practicing medicine for twenty years, and have never been able to put up a vegetable compound that would, like Simmons' Liver Regulator, promptly and effectively move the liver to action and at the same time aid (instead of weakening) the digestive powers of the system.—L. M. Hinton, M. D., Washington, Ark."

A phrenologist would have his hands full examining the heads of items in Portland and East Portland weeklies. His chart would read something like this, the common scale being 1 to 7. Size of head, 30 inches, (monstrous); organic quality, 1; mental tenacity, 0; combableness, 14; spiritual, 3; self-esteem, 21; almsiveness, 28; amity, 35; conscientiousness, 37, etc.

An exchange remarks that men who are advertised in these papers are the men who transact the business of the place. A man can pick up a newspaper, and in a few minutes tell who does the buying and selling and keep alive the interest of the place. A newspaper invariably reflects the worth, the enterprise and intelligence of the community in which it is published."
