

ANOTHER FOOL'S ERRAND.

Alton W. Tourgee is a peripatetic Bohemian who suddenly gained considerable reputation some years ago as the author of a political romance, entitled "A Fool's Errand."

There is bitterness in the republican ranks but we shall never have democratic vote and success next fall.

There are now few lawless outrages committed against the blacks of the south except in the lynching of colored brutes who criminally assault women.

Mr. Blaine asks that "all minor differences" in his party should be forgotten.

The republican platform utterance on silver certainly does not threaten that question into the campaign, except in the form of a question as to what the utterance means.

The examinations of certain prominent republican leaders as to what they did not do by declaring openly that president Harrison couldn't be elected if renominated are likely to be interesting features of the campaign.

The announcement that foreclosure proceedings have been begun against General Raum's homestead suggests that pension sharks are not grateful or that Raum is more of a speculator than a financier.

There is talk in Maine of sending Mr. Blaine to the senate. He can have the next vacancy for the taking of course, but it is not easy to say he should want the place unless, perhaps, to put the check of his intelligence upon the folly of his party.

It will be the sorrow of Whitelaw Reid's life before he gets through this campaign that he ever edited a newspaper.

The utterances of the past score of years for which he will be held responsible will so amaze him that he will be ready to flee to the protection of foreign lands.

The newspaper which is just now most vociferously telling the democracy what to do and what not to do is the same that stabbed Hancock in 1850, ran Butler in 1854, digested Cleveland in 1888 and now scarcely disguises its partisanship of the Harrison ticket while still professing to be democratic.

To maintain that Harrison is stronger now among the voters of the republican party than he was in 1888 would be to maintain that the expectation of getting nothing is a stronger inducement to work than the expectation of getting everything.

The iron manufacturers of Pennsylvania are the men who "make fortunes every year" out of the tariff and who are expected to try out their fat for the republican campaign fund.

Republican estimates of the chances of carrying Indiana always omit to mention the important element of uncertainty introduced by the reformer election law, and by the voluntary severance of relations between the president and his coalition.

The iron manufacturers of the west have been in conference in Pittsburg for some days past and have decided to offer to the Amalgamated Association, representing the iron workers, a new scale of wages.

WASHINGTON.

The democratic smile is a very broad one these days, as it has every reason to be, in view of the prospect of a hotly contested election.

It made the infamous force bill a part of its platform; it nominated the champion of that cause for president, and, as the democratic cry of joy was not only a howling, it nominated Whitelaw Reid for vice president.

Mr. Reid has another element of weakness that will neither be lost sight of nor forgiven by the old "stewards" element in the republican party.

The return of the republican bosses who were so much quieter than their departure from Washington, but, notwithstanding professed intentions of support, they are still bent upon "downing" him, and this time it will be successful, as the contest will be before a tribunal that cannot be controlled by federal officeholders.

The presence at the Minneapolis convention of such a large number of office holders, has revived the idea of an amendment to the civil service reform law, prohibiting any office holder from becoming a delegate or alternate to any nominating convention.

The investigation of the census bureau will not probably proceed much further until after the Chicago convention, as Representative Pithan, chairman of the committee has gone to Chicago to remain until the convention concludes its work.

The conference committee on the river and harbor bill held its first meeting today. It is understood that Harrison is almost as much pleased at having it succeeded in getting rid of Mr. Blaine as he is at being renominated.

Representative Ryan, of Nebraska, in his report on the tariff made such a wide and favorable impression last winter, is delighted. He says: "Harrison's renomination will be especially helpful to the democrats of the west, because he represents all that is latent in the republicans of the country. The young men are drifting to the democracy, and there is nothing about Harrison to change the drift."
