

The Democrat.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

between England and Spain. Phillip II of Spain sent his so-called "Invincible Armada" for the destruction of the British fleet and the subjugation of England. He who holds the winds in the hollow of his hand sent a storm by which the Armada was scattered and many of the ships were submerged in British waters. Catholic Spain was defeated and Protestant England was victorious. That victory made England queen of the ocean, and America was opened for Protestant Anglo-Saxon enterprise. The first English settlements were made along the Atlantic coast from Maine to Georgia. But outside of New England, New York and Virginia their colonies were little more than military outposts. West of the Allegheny mountains and on the north were the French; and in Florida and west of the Mississippi river as far as the Pacific ocean were the Spaniards. At the middle of the 18th century these two nations had control of the most fertile North American soil. In the year 1754 the French and Indian war broke out. British soldiers were sent over and they with aid of colonial troops overthrew French Catholic supremacy in 1763. In 1803, Napoleon Bonaparte, by a secret treaty, secured from Spain the Territory of Louisiana. But the dominion in Louisiana was not to last long. The British expected the re-establishment of French supremacy in the New World was not realized. In 1803, a war again arose between France and England; and Napoleon knowing that he was in danger of losing his newly acquired territory in America was glad to sell it to the United States for the sum of $15,000,000, which was used to help carry on the war with England.

The Works of Protection. Yesterday the Examiner showed by the annual messages of all the Presidents, Whig and Democratic, who served during that period, that the entire life of the revenue tariff of 1846 was one of uncheeked property, and that the still lower tariff which followed it gave the country a continuation of its prosperity, except for a brief interruption in the form of a financial panic caused by wildcat banking. It may be of interest now to contrast this experience with that of the high-tariff period that succeeded the era of Democratic rule. The Morrill tariff of 1861 was introduced as a revenue measure to meet the needs of the government. At this time protection was a discredited system which no party was anxious to favor. Daniel F. Sikes, speaking on the proposed tariff in the House on February 25, 1861, said: "My general objection to the bill is that it is not in the interest of the country. The tariff of protectionists, in violation of the principles of all the great political parties of the country, is to be maintained. In answering such objections Mr Morrill the author of the new tariff, and now one of the Republican leaders in the Senate, remarked: "Now the tariff of 1846 was called a revenue measure. It is no longer a revenue measure, but a tariff of protection. It is the mark of the bill of 1846 that sets upon very many articles as much lower."

MISFITS: The Carr of Russia and death are running a fast race with the chances of favor of death. There are classes and classes; classes in painting, classes in music, classes in music, classes in dancing and classes in this and in that, but we never hear of any classes in housework. A few instructions in bread baking and how to boil beans would be of vastly more benefit to mankind than drawing art music. - Astoria Budget.

TELEGRAPHIC. Whittier on Hill. CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 23.-Ex-Secretary of the Navy, Whittier was here today on business. In an interview regarding the political situation in New York, Whittier said: "So far as Senator Hill's campaign for the governorship is concerned, there can be no doubt that he will have a brilliant and energetic contest. He was nominated at the Saratoga convention through no action of his own, as I have every reason to know, and he was nominated in spite of it. He is, however, a magnificent leader and will make the campaign one of the most interesting of the many campaigns he has conducted for the democratic party in New York."

Are You Ready, We Are. With a clean, NEW stock of GENTLEMEN'S WEAR. Bought on FREE TRADE basis. DO YOU HEAR OF CHEAP SUITS? Hold your $10.00 until you see the Dress, well made, ALL WOOL, Fast colored; outfits our customers are wearing. SPECIALTIES: Underwear and Woolen Shirts, Macintoshes, Boots and Shoes. THE L E BLAIN CLOTHING CO. ALBANY OREGON.

Notice for Publication. U. S. LAND OFFICE AT OREGON CITY, O., Sept. 27, 1894. Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, under section 2201 R. S. and that said proof will be made before the Register and Receiver U. S. Land Office at Oregon City, Or., on Nov. 21, 1894, viz: Robert M. Fox, H. E. No 10811 for the N 1/2 W 1/2 S 1/4 N 1/4 W 1/4 and lot 3 Sec 10 T 10 S R 12 E. He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz: J. B. Laidler, J. W. Peter, M. F. Perry, George Sowers, J. J. Ryland, all of Detroit, Or. ROBERT A. MILLER, Register.

Notice for Publication. U. S. LAND OFFICE AT OREGON CITY, O., Sept. 27, 1894. Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, under section 2201 R. S. and that said proof will be made before the Register and Receiver U. S. Land Office at Oregon City, Or., on Nov. 21, 1894, viz: J. B. Laidler, J. W. Peter, M. F. Perry, George Sowers, J. J. Ryland, all of Detroit, Or. ROBERT A. MILLER, Register.

Notice for Publication. U. S. LAND OFFICE AT OREGON CITY, O., Sept. 27, 1894. Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, under section 2201 R. S. and that said proof will be made before the Register and Receiver U. S. Land Office at Oregon City, Or., on Nov. 21, 1894, viz: J. B. Laidler, J. W. Peter, M. F. Perry, George Sowers, J. J. Ryland, all of Detroit, Or. ROBERT A. MILLER, Register.

Albany Insurance Agency. We have had over seven years experience as the Home office and local insurance business, and our policies are written by us to be properly looked after, following in a partial list of companies represented by us: Foreign-North British & Mercantile, Norwich Union, Phoenix, London, Manchester, Guardian, Sun, Caledonian, London & Lancashire, American-Continental of New York, Western of New York, The Continental, New York and Manchester of England, write farm business, taking notes for the premium, with ample surety for payment. We respectfully solicit any good business. Office opposite old post office. M SENDER. Star Bakery. CORNER 10TH AND FIRST STS. CONRAD MEYER, PROPRIETOR. We are everything that is kept in a grocery store and market prices paid for.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.

Honor To Whom?

That the United States is a great nation does not admit of a doubt. No one except a monarchist, who sees nothing good in republicanism, even calls this fact in question. Whence comes this greatness? Every effect must have a cause. The United States is no exception to this principle. Its magnitude is not the result of chance. It is not the spontaneous outgrowth of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, but the outcome of a determined effort on the part of the founders of the nation, and their successors, to establish a government upon the principles of the Bible.