Up to and including yesterday only seven bills had passed both houses and been sent to the governor for his approval. Of these six are senate bills and one a house bill, and they were all approved by Governor Lord yesterday. The house bill (of questioned constitutionality) authorizes a certain school district in Portland to borrow money. One of the senate bills, approprimoney. One of the senate bills appropri-ates $40,000 for the expenses of the present legislative session, but later estimates go to show that this amount will be from $12 000 to $13,000 or more thousands of dollars short of the requirements. The other bills relate to the incorporation of Hillsboro, Burns, Fossil and Florence, and one author-izes Astoria to bridge Young's bay.—

piano duet by Misses Maud Crosby and Marguerite Hopkins put the audience in good humor for what followed. Ten little girls in white gave a May pole drill that was prettily performed. Mrs. Telfer was heard in a vocal solo, which upon encore was responded to. A piano solo by Miss Marguerite Hopkins was Mr. Charles Hart continued his good. Mr. Charles Hart continued his county superintendent knocked at the popularity in a vocal solo with guitar door of the school house for admission, popularity in a vocal solo with guitar accomposiment that was heartily encored. A scarf drill by Misses Grace Piper, Bertha Ellis, Emma Pfeiffer, Lora Vance, Vesta Mason, Edna Mackey and Stella Porter, in Grecian costumes, with varied colored scarfs, and with Miss Piper as the central figure, was performed with grace, making a strong impression on the audience. The feature of the evening was the elocutionary exhibitions by Mrs. Chas, Reily, of Salem. Mrs. Reily recited Ben Hurr, in Grecian costume, the Rajput Nurse, Death Dream, Money Musk and several appropriate minor sclections in response to encores, once a double ovation. The selections displayed her versatility of talent. Backed by a pleasing presence, her wonderful energy, sympathetic action, grace of gesture appropriate for the occasion, natural expression, and well rounded voice, fully under control, thrown well forward where it belongs in true voice culture, sowed for hear a great speces. She heres where it belongs in true voice culture, little fellow told the truth and that the pedagogue wanted the fact concealed. After fifty minutes passed the rest of the school returned with its bucket of water. There were only two of them and the with the boy in the corner made three the total attendance at that *schoo where recitations waited until intere in the novel subsided. The school bega with sixteen, but no wonder that dwindled to three before the term ende
