THURSDAY

AN INSANE OHLID,-The Salem Post gives the facts: One of the saddest cases that has come under our notice of late was conducted before Judge Hubbard's court this morning. It was the examination for insanity of Clifford Caspell, a sixpell, who reside at Stayton. The little lellow when about four months old was afflicted with a severe case of brain fever. afflicted with a severe case of brain fever, which after his recovery, left his mind entirely blank. The mother of the boy was in court and related the actions of the child ever since its mind became deranged. She said that the little fellow did not know her, or in fact anyone, and that he continually went around mumbling to himself in an incoherent manner. He did not know enough to feed himself and had to be waited upon like an infant. As the examination was going on the mother could not suppress the tears which rolled down her cheeks. It was a pitiful case, and greatly affected those who were present at the examination. During the proceedings the child sat in a chair rolling his eyes around the room in a very peculiar way, paying no attention to what was going on or who was present. "At home" said the mother, "where I have several other children, this unfortunate one would never mingle with the other case are with the other case. the child ever since its mind became de-ranged. A MINISTER ARRESTED. - Dallas has ined the field of romance and this week he comes forth with a case full to the brim with an exciting tale of adventure.

A preacher of considerable prominence residing in that city is the hero of the occasion. Here is the way it was told, but we will omit the names of all parties concerned. Several months ago there appeared in that quiet and peaceable little city a middle-aged man with two bright and charming little daughters. They were not located in their new home long before they made the acquaintance of many of the young ladies residing in their neighborhood. They were smart and pleasant creatures and whoever met them soon took great interest in their welfare. Suddenly the two disappeared and it was some time before their whereabouts was ascertained. The father was almost distracted until he at last dis-covered that one of them had been ab-ducted by their mother, who suddenly appeared upon the scene unbeknown to the father. The other one was in the eeping of a minister of that city. The usband and father immediately swore t a warrant for the ministers arrest arging him with abduction. The case ame before the justice of peace and reated lots of fan. An amicable settlement was soon perfected between the husband and wife, the preacher was dis-

She is Mrs. John Schuldt, and for more than year she has run the four horse power ngine in the Corvallis Mills creamery. During that time not one dollar of pairs has been put on the machine and the fire in the furnace has always made steam just as successfully as if the per-ton in charge had been arrayed in trousers. Besides operating the engine, Mrs. H. J. Ho Schuldt runs the separator, churns the on business cream, works the butter and prepares it for market. Let it be recorded in history that there was plenty of opportunity for wideawake women to thrive in the closng years of the nineteenth century.

PECULIAR FIGURING .- The amount the check sent Governor Lord for the maintenance of soldier inmates of the soldier's home $337.53, seems quite a small stipend. This is at the rate of $100 per year and is allowance made from December 4, 1894 to December 31, 1894. The national authorities undoubtedly err if the board has correctly reported t them. By act of congress $100 per year is appropriated for each volunteer kept in any state soldier's home. Oregon's soldier's home was dedicated May 24, 1894, with seven inmates registered on day of opening. On December 1 there were sixty registered and a very small per cent can be reckoned as volunteer f $337.53 is the sum due.-Post.

Recently the Democrar published a recipt for spraying which is said to be the best known. As our issue of the paper contaming it ran out we republish the recipt bill against A. F. Stowe, thus releasing him from custody. This action was due, not to a lack of evidence, for his wrong doing was evident, but for the purpose of giving the defendant one more chance of reformation. By the aid of a few benevolent gentlemen, bonds were obtained a few days before court; and by the help of other kindly disposed persons, sufficient money was raised to re-imburse Mr. J. Hearing, whose money had been appropriated by Mr. Stowe. Not man, within the memory of the oldest inhabitant, has ever been helped so often and so generously as has been this man, and but few have shown so little gratitude. Drink has brought him within the shadow of a felon's cell; and, unless he speedily reforms, drink will yet make him a felon. We hope that this lesson so dearly bought, will prove to him a lasting warning and be the means of opening before him a successful and honorable career.

Recently the Democrar published a recipt for spraying which is said to be the best known. As our issue of the paper containing it ran out we republish the recipt by request:

Unslackened lime, 30 pounds; powdered sulphur 20 pounds; to be used with 60 gallons of water, and boil in a lively way for at least two hours, or until the sulphur is dissolved. Then put the other 20 pounds of lime in a barrel, or large tub that will hold all, and water enough to make the 60 gallons. The prescription make rays it must be applied luke warm, but that is not so easily done. If you have a sled to haul it about the orchard on, and work rather lively, you may a sled to pet it on before it gets really cold, but in a wintry sort of a day, such as we have when the trees are dormant, the solution won't reach the tree in a very warm state after being reduced.
