A Teacher's Paper.

The teachers of Oregon at convention The teachers of Oregon at convention convened at Eugene, June 19, 1896, effected an organization to be known as the Oregon Teachers' Club. The object of the organization is to promote unity of enort in educational fields; to bring a closer correlation between the different grades of work and foster a spirit of fraternal symmathy. To promote the alternal symmathy. ternal sympathy. To promote the ob-ject of the club and education generally, it was determined to publish a journal to be called the "Oregon Teachers' Monti-ly" and the following editorial committee was appointed.

A glance at the above is sufficient evidence of the success of the journal. The editors of the various departments are specialist in the line of work assigned them and are progressive and enthusiastic teachers of the state. The teachers of Oregon have long demanded a live paper devoted to the schools of the state and at last the leading teachers have taken the matter into their own hands with a determination to supply that demand by giving to the teachers of the A glance at the above is sufficient ev-Mr. John McNeil, sen., died at his home ten miles north of Harrisburg, on the 15th inst., at the advanced age of
