The Democrat.

Silver Republicans.

The following are some outspoken letters from silver republicans to the Examiner:

SPokane, (Wash.), July 26.—W. R. Hearn, "The Examiner," San Francisco: After a careful study of the great issue now before the public, I do not see how I can longer conscientiously vote the republican ticket.

Briefly stated, the United States is the great debtor nation of the world, and if she can succeed in holding America in line and having us adopt a gold standard she will remain in 1896 by the pen what she lost in 1876 by the sword. I believe in America for Americans, and that this nation is powerful enough to maintain the double standard without the aid of other nations.

I fully indorse the nominee of the Chicago Convention. Mr. Bryan is the first nominee for the presidency west of the Mississippi. He is a young man and should command the entire vote of the younger element of this country. He stands on a platform never equalled in the history of this nation since the Declaration of Independence. It is a campaign of the masses against the masses, and the masses shall stand. We must bear in mind the words of the immortal Lincoln: "The welfare of the Republic is best served by the combined judgment of the masses."

LOS ANGELES, July 26.—I have been a republican for forty years, but when I saw the platform of the St. Louis convention I walked out with him. The party came into power on the slavery question. I think there is far more fear of slavery today than when we were fighting for the legends of Ham. Then there were four millions, more or less; now there are upward of seventy millions that are tied land and to the money power, and will actual want striving them in the face, they will make a brave effort to make money for themselves.

Bryan must be a wonderful man to rise from the ranks as quickly as he did with no other aid than his own energetic efforts. The producing classes and the people who have only their labor to sell will both rally to the support of Bryan. I think when he is elected, it will aid in restoring prosperity. Address at Normal Training School, Monmouth, Ore.

SPokane, (Wash.), July 26.—I consider it the duty of every voter to first consider the welfare of his country, and in so doing he should not hesitate to vote for the principles that he believes will bring about the best government for the people, republicans, democrats or populists; therefore I shall vote for Bryan and free silver, although I have always heretofore voted the republican ticket, believing that that party was most in sympathy with the masses. But when they open their national convention with prayer by a relation of his, I thought I would vote for Bryan and free silver, although I have always heretofore voted the republican ticket, believing that that party was most in sympathy with the masses.

LOS ANGELES, July 26.—I was born and educated in a republican atmosphere. The cardinal principles of republicanism were planted in my mind at an early age, and with deeper succeeding year, took deeper and deeper until they finally became to me a sacred creed, which I thought I would never waver from. Now I find myself in the democratic ranks, an earnest admirer and supporter of William J. Bryan. What has caused the change? The answer is found in one word—silver. After devoting many months to the study of the money question, I have come to the conclusion that the only way to restore our prosperity would be to strike out all gold and silver money from our circulation, and to issue in its place a paper money, the value of which would be based on the silver content of the metal.

Our silver dollars were at a premium of something like 3 per cent over gold in 1873, when silver was demonetized in this country, says the Republic. This was because our coinage ratio was 15 to 1, while that of France and other countries of the Latin Union, was 16 to 1. So our silver dollars had more metal in them than was required in the corresponding coins of those bimetallic countries, and it paid to export our dollars and recoin them where the ratio was less. About the time that we demonetized silver, or a little later, France and Germany, who had been on the free coinage of silver, these acts, together with the action of the British Government in closing the mints of India to the free coinage of silver in 1863, are the causes of the great depreciation in the price of silver bullion. The U. S. is sufficiently strong to bring the price back to par upon free coinage.

Now that Mr. Miller has been elected, whatever the means used may have been, we must give him a chance to show what metal he is made of. The Democrat believes a college president should be trained for the position; still Mr. Miller can demonstrate his capacity, with out such training even of an agricultural college we shall be glad to learn of the mode. It is a position that takes executive ability and we shall watch with interest how he executes them. Perhaps he will prove a college rector, but we do not expect that. He is a man up to the work, and yet the Democrat is informed that there is considerable dissatisfaction over his retention among some of the students, displaying the fact that even "college" men do not always take with everybody.

If you would go west and grow up with the country, come to Oregon. Come to the Willamette Valley, come to the center of it, right here in our country. There are the best farming lands in the U. S. Mr. Hutchins was astonished at the extent of timber interests, here are good mines and great prospects, here is a magnificent climate, take it the year round unexcelled anywhere; here is scenery that warms one to view it, and cheers one to be in the midst of it. We may be about last but we are not least. Already we have a splendid civilization and many advantages. Come ahead of the tide. It is rolling this way.

SATURDAY NIGHT THOUGHTS

United against dead beats. Wholesale get a pointer. Careless bathers. Not the hardest here. A popular artist. Richard himself again.

The mercantile organization being formed for the protection of merchants is not a bad idea, if carried out in the right manner. Under it the customers of a city are stated according to their promptness in paying their debts. Just how that will be found out we do not know. If they will let the newspaper men take a hand they can help them out and give a few pointers. There is a class of men who make no effort to pay anything, and merchants should unite and absolutely refuse credit.

In some big city wholesale houses are being organized to protect themselves from the wholesale trade. They are being organized to protect themselves from the wholesale trade. They are being organized to protect themselves from the wholesale trade.

People who think times are hard here generally find out that they are just as hard and harder than in other places if they investigate matters; distance lends enchantment to the view, but investigation removes the powder from the face and reveals the wrinkles behind.

A gentleman in the city who knows Homer Davenport, the now celebrated cartoonist, well, says he is very popular, and is as much of a wit and entertainer personally, as he is an entertainer with his pencil in the columns of the news papers. He has an art hand way that is very taking; but when he comes to put it on paper instead of doing it naturally, it is not so good. It is a pity that his composition, thus taking away the features that characterize his conversation.

Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, July 27, 1896. Bryan's nomination for president by the populist convention after he had declined the nomination because that convention had nominated Tom Watson instead of Sewell for vice president was much more satisfactory to the average democrat than it would have been under other circumstances.

Every day the Indian gives new evidence of his ability to take on the vicissitudes of civilization, if he has little else to his virtues. Last Monday evening two Indians entered the office of the department of the Boston street, in Pendleton, ostensibly to do a little trading. While one of them engaged the attention of Clerk Watson, the other, a young man, overalls and made off with them. He proceeded to O'Daniel's second hand hardware store, and there he was seen to be carrying a pair of trousers, which he had been feeding to near Young's bay.
