government. Under it there should be a united, loyal sentiment, a common love for our country, the greatest on the face of the earth, so great that no other country can dictate its internal policies,—it can lead. It is a flag for the poorest person, for the farmer toiling to raise the burden of a never resting mortgage, as well as for the richest man in wall street with his insatiate greed, it knows no class. It is a flag of now over every true American head, for as every new state is organized a new star is added It is peculiarly a flag for the masses. Remember this.

We give in keeping with the subject a verse from Rev. Cornwall's peem:

Let each star of the union give lustre so bright,

That wrong and oppression shall vanish from sight,

And our tax-burdened people, with glad hearts shall see,

The gold sceptre broken, in the land of the free.

With love for his cause, let each star light his way,
