The water of the mineral spring is still the same, so far as I can discover; but one of the boarders at the hotel, a lady from Idaho, does not agree with me and insists that the water of the Waterloo spring is far stronger than that of the Sodaville spring. In taking a diagnosis of her case I found the only hope for her was a change of local habitation. She could not see anything good in Sodaville. The mineral water was not good, the hotel cooking did not suit her, even the milk was sour. She found fault with the front part of the hall of the Sodaville Band, because too much lumber had been used in its decoration. So far as I can learn there was but one thing in Sodaville, not of it, that had any attraction for her and when that left town, she for her, and when that left town, she was unhappy, or rather utterly miser-able, and took her departure Lee-ward I

THE HARRISBURG MURDER.

From the Guard: Harvey Sommerville arrived in Eqgene last evening and this morning Guard reporter learned the followin particulars concerning the killing of Charles Turner by T. M. young Turner and abused him and ac cused him of making trouble in his family. A short time after this Turner got a letter through the postoffice, signed "M," warning him that they (probably meaning himself and Mrs. Mc-Grath) had been detected and he must not come to the house again. Then in about a wrek McGrath came and gave Turner a letter addressed to him, saying he had found it in the road with a one cent stamp on it. This letter warned a him to leave the country; that they were suspected and that Mrs. McGrath and himself would soon be killed. Advised him to never come to the house. This letter was unsigned. He showed these letters to Mr. Som-merville and Willard Simmons, and they thought they were written by McGrath. Since that time McGrath had abused the boy twice, and then several times professed the greatest friendship for him and invited the young man to his home. At one of the interviews, when McGrath was abusing Coariey, Mrs. McGrath appeared on the scene and invited him to her home, saying she owned it. McGrath got very angry and told her to go
