THE MOORE CASE.

An Interesting Letter from Mrs' Judge Strahan in Reference to the Case.

ATLANTA, Ga, Jan. 4, '99.

EDITOR DEMOCRAT:

From your issue of Dec. 30, under the heading of the "Moore Trial" and "Nineteen Years," the types make many errors in dates and the unjust inferences and general summing up of the dates. I do not hold you responsible for the mistakes, 'tis the N. Y. press from which you draw information. The N. Y. press is moved by the District Atty's office especially McIntyre, who seeks to draw crime out of the most innocent facts. In days of yore I believe the press aimed to be a reliable vehicle of truth, but recent events persuades me that even a flavor of truth shall not go in if it, in the least, spoil a dish of sensationalism. Of course, if the press refuse to see the "Moore Case" through any but Mahon lenses, and he be a moral leper of most festering taint, who, time and again perjured himself while on the stand, then the public must remain in darkness. But there is quite a large minority who knows the truth and this minority will ever condemn the press. I believe all who know me give me credit for the truth. The principle of honesty is the one I have cherished above all others, and if there be one person in all this union who can successfully contradict this statement, now is his or her time to speak.

Now as to facts: My daughter never left Atlanta with a man by the name of Ryan. Mr. Ryan is a gentleman who has resided in New York for a number of years, and a member of a family of prominence and wealth, who are pioneers of Atlanta He has known my little girl from childhood. The billiard story is a mere canard. Mr. Ryan was an acquaintance of Mr. Moore before my daughter had met him, and was a witness to the marriage in St. Matthews church. My daughter went to New York with an elderly lady friend who promised to be a mother to her. I was on the train with them till it pulled out of the depot. Three weeks later I went to New York and was with Fayne till the moment of her sailing to Europe. This same chaperon accompanied her through the whole tour—from dock to dock—and I state unqualifiedly, there was no man in it. I went to N. Y. for the purpose of going with Fayne abroad, but was overcome by the intense heat and found myself unable to endure further fatigue. The report that an entry in Mrs. Moore's diary gave evidence of her intimacy with Ellis, the Cuban. As I remarked in the beginning. I hold you blameless because the report was directed by McIntyre in this assertion. But I say unto you that there is not one sentence in her diary to connect her with any improper intimacy to any one. Fayne's purpose in keeping a diary was simply to recall dates and names of persons whom she'd meet abroad and in New York, wishing to bring me exact news of her journeyings. Her memory for dates and names was defective. There never was a more dastardly act—one far beneath the cloth of an honest prosecutor—than that of McIntyre taking the child's inoffensively kept diary into court and making a fiendish effort to establish her guilt before a jury that was sitting in a robbery case. And were it not a lamentable fact that Recorder Goff seems ruled by the Dist. Atty's office, it would not have been allowed. The prosecutor, McIntyre, had his purpose in placing an evil construction on every act of Mrs. Moore's life. Just remember he is paid to convict. And also, that "evil is to whom evil thinks." Doubtless he has had a career. Mrs. Moore's diary is an innocent memorandum which anyone may examine. The report further stated that "Goff took into consideration Moore's character and criminal record, the fact that his profession was that of a gambler, a card sharp, bunco steerer, bigamist and general all-round scoundrel; and doubtless too the manner in which he used his young wife, the weak and fascinating Fayne Strahan, in the accomplishment of his base and criminal designs." Now, I would ask, who knows Moore's criminal record? There was no evidence introduced to show it. The woman Gaw, who swore falsely out of revenge and whose testimony was stricken out, certainly could not be considered. Moore was never married to that woman's daughter which can be easily proven when Moore is given the shadow of a chance. It is the N. Y. press which has biased the minds of the populace till 'tis next to impossible to get an unprejudiced jury. All these stories of "Count De Novaek,—"Brooklyn black mail"—The Johnson woman's false testimony, etc., are absolutely false without a shadow of foundation in fact, and investigation is invited.

Fayne Strahan has inherited the gift of honesty and it cannot be tampered with. She is broken hearted at the way the press has tried to make her a base criminal, when her mistake was simply that of being misled by Martin Mahon, who was old enough for her father and who should have honorably protected the fatherless stranger in New York instead of taking the advantage of her childish confidence. Call her "weak" or what you like there is a touch in nature which makes us all akin, and when men grow sufficiently strong to control that weakness, then we shall invite one of their member to cast the first stone. But don't go dodging around Eve with fine airs of purity till you cease to make women, even children, your victims. Were it not for the demon aleshop which come between Mr. and Mrs. Moore, and the advantage Mahon took of the situation, there would have been no beating and signed confession that night at Hotel Grenoble. Mahon should have been with his wife and children whom he always denied living with when representing himself to Mrs. Moore. The slimy creature has tortured facts into a misshapen mass. The ghouls (detectives) work well for gold! The gallows frock is too good for one who would arrest his own innocent victim. These are facts. Mr. Moore had a confession from Mahon and Mrs. Moore. He had placed the confession in the hands of his lawyer. Of course that meant civil action for divorce and redress. Mahon knowing this sent detectives to get the confession. They did not go to arrest, but Mr. Moore not knowing they were detectives (no badge in sight) regarded their approach as an intrusion on his home and struck the intruder. Of course they arrested him at once. Mrs. Moore had just reached the hotel for the first time since the night of the 4th in order to pack her trunk and come home. They had designed a scheme to make them (Moore's) blackmailers if the confession could not be secured. Of course, Mrs. Moore must be made a party to the scheme to make it look at all tangible. I am not much acquainted with Mr. Moore but I know Fayne Strahan quite well, and can say of a truth, she would rather give than take—is strictly honest. This is clearly the opinion of any who know her, either white or colored. It is a source of much comfort to me to behold my table covered with testimonials to her honesty; 'tis only strangers who would doubt for a moment.

The report said: "If she gains her immunity from punishment as predicted she probably will owe much to the influence of the N. Y. press, which is understood will get in and help her case." Truly my friend, the glove is on the other hand. The N. Y. press owes that defenseless child more than it can ever repay for its libelous attitude towards her.

Knowing the facts as I do, I presume the mistake Mr. Moore made was in not shooting Mahon (though I am glad he did not) dead as Hector, when he found him in his apartments. Our people cry, Mercy! Humanity! but when the entreaties are heard, the merciful are in danger of wearing a convicts garb. They may send Mrs. Moore to Sing Sing; McIntyre and the press have done their best, but if they do—remember it will be because she, like a N. Y. Mayor, who was promoted to the presidency—"Told the Truth." Twice her liberty was offered her but she would rather take her chances on the convicts garb than go free under the horrid shadow of a lie. Her att'ys say they have rarely seen such bravery exhibited.

If Recorder Goff took Moore's character into consideration without it being attacked in court, why did he especially charge the jury in Mrs. Moore's case that they were not to take Mahon's character or his intimacy with Fayne Strahan Moore into consideration? Mr. Hill said it was the most infamous charge that he had heard delivered.

"Alabama."

Judging from the criticisms and reports of the newspapers in various places, the coming visit of Mr. Henry W Laugenour's Company presenting "Alabama," will be one of the theatrical treats of the season. Everywhere the press has accorded both the play and the players the most flattering notices. Perhaps no play of the present generation has now the hold upon public favor as has this beautiful creation of Augustus Thomas. For three years, without break, it held undisputed sway in New York City, and twice has it made the circuit of this continent, everywhere meeting with the most pronounced success. To those who have never seen "Alabama," it is as a beautiful revelation, while those who have been fortunate enough to see it before, it comes as welcome as an old friend. "Alabama" is an emotional comedy drama, if such a term be permissable. It is replete with domestic incidents of pathetic and absorbing interest. Through it runs the delicate threads of a most ingenious plot and two pretty love stories, one of which is as full of romance as it is of pathos. Comedy of the purest and most enjoyable kind is plentifully scattered throughout it all. It is a play that in the hands of any but competent people would prove a failure, and the many good notices that this company have received elsewhere bespeak their competency and worth. Mr Laugenour has a particularly well selected company, and our theatre-going public may make arrangements for an unusually good entertainment. One performance only is given, next Tuesday night, Jan. 17th. Reserved seats now on sale at Burkhart & Lee's.

Hops.

Faber & Neis write from Albany to an eastern paper about the Oregon hop crop as follows:

Stock in growers' hands in Oregon is now considered reduced and not over 2,000 bales of '98 crop remain unsold, of which a very small percentage are of real choice quality. Beginning of the season there were nearly 6,000 bales of 1897 in dealers' and growers' hands in this state, which have all been sold with the exception of about 300 bales. Most of these hops have brought from 3 to 6½c net to growers and only a few very mouldy lots were sold for less.

The market continues firm but quiet. Several bigger lots have been sold this week at from 14 to 15½ cents according to quality. Growers which have their hops on hand yet do not seem to be scared as they are all holding for full value and expect to realize more for their hops after the holidays.

SUCCESSFUL SHOW.

The Oregon State Poultry show continues to be a great success, being more than self-sustaining from a financial standpoint and much more from an industrial view. One woman who came through the rain more than twenty miles got her money's worth.

Tomorrow will be children's day from 9 a. m. to 12, when children will be admitted for 5 cents.

At noon tomorrow Prof. Chambers will hypnotise a young man and put him to sleep in the show room where he will be during the afternoon. He will be awakened at 8:30 o'clock

Music by the Simonton band.

The association is fortunate in having some first-class officers. Mr. Bates, the superintendent, is efficient and alive to the needs of the occasion. Mr. Fenwick, the secretary, is accommodating and is the right man at the desk, Mr. Lee, the treasurer, doesn't stop with holding the purse, but takes a hand wherever needed, and a large force of assistants are very active.

In the pen awards the highest score was given Mr. Carlisle's light Brahmas, 188½. Oley Woodworth was next with his pen of Silverlaced Wyandottes, 188 out a possible 200. Mr. C. D. Bates' white Wyandottes were next with 187¼. G. W. Downs barred Plymouth Rocks were given 184¾ and Hulburt Brothers pen of Cochins, 184¼.

The highest score of any single bird was that given a partridge Cochin pullet owned by Frank Hulburt, 95½. A cockerel owned by G. W. Downs scored by Mr. Roberts was given 94½. Mr. Downs paid $25 for it in Eugene. As the scoring of Mr. Roberts was very close this signifies a good deal. He cut several points below the figures at Portland last year.

Mr. Roberts probably does more judging than any poultry man on the coast. From Albany he will go to Arizona to score a big poultry show.

The present show has been so satisfactory that there is talk of holding next years show in Albany. The association will meet next Saturday night in their annual meeting when the matter will be decided. Albany's location makes it a splendid place for the meeting.

There is a fine display of dressed fowls and eggs, on which the following premiums were awarded:

Best dressed goose, Alden S. Hulburt.
" " duck " " "
" " male chicken, Alden S. Hulburt.

MURDER AT LYONS.

James Lyons Shot Through Window and Instantly Killed

Last night at Lyons, just after James Lyons, a prominent citizen of place, was shot by some one from side, through the window, of his residence, the ball striking him in the killing him.

A man at Lyons got on a velocipede and went to Mill City, where he telegraphed Coroner Norman, of this city last night through the Western Union office at the depot, the regular office closed and the Coroner left on the morning train for the place to investigate the matter. At Mill City the particulars other than stated were not known as there is no office at Lyons it is probable they cannot be obtained until the Coroner arrives tonight.

There has been a feud among several of the residents of Lyons for some time and it is thought the murder is a result of it. The report indicates that the murderer will not be known, the deed being done in the dark, but it is probable there will be suspicions as to parties.

James Lyons, Jr., a son of the murdered man, was in the city studying stenography with Mr Freerksen, and received notice of the murder this morning just in time to catch the train for home.

Mr. Lyons was about sixty years of age. He leaves a wife and six children, four sons and two daughters.

A gentleman familiar with affairs at Lyons says he could name three men who will be suspected of the crime.

Sheriff Munkers and Deputy Prosecuting Attorney Whitney left this noon for Lyons on a railroad velocipede to investigate the affair.

THE LAST DAY.

This is the last day the roosters will have to crow in Albany before leaving for their homes in different parts of the state. They have had a fine time in Albany and will leave with the best wishes for themselves and their owners. For six days we have had something to see and talk about.

There has been a big attendance during the day, a large number of farmers and their families going to see what a development there can be in fowls.

Tonight besides the birds there will be a stereopticon exhibition of some splendid views, many of local interest, by Messrs. George Achison and Ed Blodgett, of this city, and an exhibition of hypnotism by Prof. Robert Chambers.

There should be a big farewell reception.

After the poultry show last night Vice President D O Woodworth gave a banquet to the officers, executive committee and Portland newspaper men that was as great a success and full of cackle as the show itself. The spread was an elegant one and the hen men were competent judges. After the feast remarks were called for and made by Judge Roberts, President Robinson, Mr Woodworth, Mr Goodhue of the Poultry Journal, Mr Loomis of the Poultry Fancier, Mr Bailey of the Rural Spirit and Mr Lee of the Pacific Farmer. Besides those mentioned there were present Secretary Fenwick, C S Shedd, S E Young, L W Rose and A W Blackburn of the executive committee.
