O'Mallev's Rise.

Old times are recalled to many Corvallis business men by the presence in town of W. H. Dunphy, Pacific Coast ty road, granted. manager of The Home Life Insurance P tition and Clifford et al for county company, of New York. The initial visit of Mr. Dunphy occurred twe've years ago. With him was King O'Malley, popularly known as 'The Wild Irishman,' The two, in a two weeks campaign, insured no less than sixty Corvallis business men, carrying away risks aggregating $200,000. Among those insured was President B. L. Arno d $10,000 Dr. J. M. Applewhite, $5 000 and Philip Weber, $2,000, whose policies at death were all promptly paid.

O'Malley, sometime after leaving Corvallis, retire from the insurance usiness, and went to Australia. In that country he prospered, and is now said to be worth about six million dollars. He is a member of parliament for South Adelaide, and in that capacity has secured the passage among other im ant measures of a bill for the construction of a railroad, which with connect ing the office.
