A widow sixty-eight years old, living in New York City, had been during the nine years She was constantly troubled with pains on her right side, which seemed to be caused by the liver. Up to last June she had been treated by a number of physicians, one of whom claimed she had catarrh of the stomach; another stated that it was ordinary dyspepsia, and still another pronounced it biliary calculus, or gall stones, for which he treated her several months without good results. At times the pains were so severe that hypodermic injections of morphine were resorted to. The patient weighed 109 pounds; was completely run down, and had very little appetite. Early in June a neighbor induced her to try Ripans Tabules. After using them two weeks the pains and bloating of the stomach and colic ceased and pasnea entirely disappeared. The patient had practically recovered by September 15th. She had gained eleven pounds, and could eat baked beans, among other dishes, without ill results.
