A FAKK.—The following was found in a bottle in the ditch Saturday evening by an Anderson boy and turned over to the coroner: "Albany, Ore., March 21, 1900. Any person finding this bottle and paper will please let my people know that I drowned myself in the Lebanon ditch, one mile east of Albany, and oblige, (Signed) E. Steurds, Tallman, Ore." It is of course a fake. In connection with it a boy medium went along the ditch and located the body under the Elkins' falls. It was not there of course.

WITHDRAWN.—Prof. W. H. Lee, who was elected one of the delegates to the republican county convention requests the Democrat to state that his name was used without his consent and that he desires it withdrawn from the list of delegates. COLLEGE ATHLETICS.—The State University paper contains an article on the College Athletic Association, of which the following is a part: "The leading editorial in the March Albany College Student is a rare specimen. For scrupulous pettishness of thought and persistent evasion of fact it has few equals. In the course of four paragraphs the college representatives who met at Salem on February 24th, are dubbed "hoodlums," "fally" and "hoodlum athletes," "wre-pullers" and men incapable of sober thought. Mt. Angel has a good basketball team but they have taken no part in collegiate sports. Albany has a spasmodic foot-ball team which, on their field, makes a fair antagonist for our second eleven. In track athletics both are, as yet, unproved. Too many inferior athletes compete at Salem every year." Under this program a smaller college is to be given no chance because not with the top notchers. This is narrow.

HOME AND ABROAD.
