OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 9th, 1873.

The Third Term Men at Work.

The organization which was formed some three years ago for the purpose of securing Grant's re-nomination for a second term, has already had one or two informal meetings for the purpose of determining upon a comprehensive plan for gradually familiarizing the masses of the republican party with the following ideas: First, that there is nothing dreadful, "per se," in a president serving three terms; next, that if the country has a good president, it would be foolish to set him aside for no better reason than that somebody else wanted the position; and lastly, as the time for the nominating convention approaches, that domestic tranquility at the South and the integrity of the Union can be assured only by continuing Grant in the presidential chair for a third term.

The Press is to be Used.

extensively for the dissemination of these ideas; and it has been determined that, after while, only avowed third term men shall be appointed to vacancies in the civil service, and that the tenure of office of every man, from the cabinet officer to the night watchman of a custom house, shall depend upon his openly expressed views favoring a third term. Preparations are being made for as desperate a struggle for political and financial power as any that history has recorded. Not only the administration office-holders, but the carpet bag governments of the Southern States, the National bank men, the bondholders, the railroad land-grabbers, the salary-grabbers, the credit mobliier swindlers, the wealthy manufacturers, the men with fraudulent claims who divide with the officials that put their jobs thro' all these men have too good a thing to give up without a fearful and expensive contest.

Proposed Increase of the Civil Service Army.

The seed sown by the Bureau of Internal Revenue in the several States produced such rich crops of administration votes last autumn, that the third term men have determined to create, if possible, a few more bureaus and to reconstruct others, so as to necessitate a vast addition to the already large army of federal office-holders. With that end in view, every preparation is being made that human ingenuity can devise to place before the 43d Congress and the people, in a favorable light, a bill to authorize the

Government To Purchase The Telegraph Lines
—all the lines in the country—to place them under the control of the Postmaster General, and to prohibit the future construction of private lines, even by State authority—in short, to place telegraphic communication on the same footing, in every respect, as the present postal service.

The agents, superintendents, operators and other employees in government telegraph offices, all over the Union, will be quite serviceable during a presidential campaign.

Another measure of the third term men will be the creation of which shall see that the post-offices, custom houses court rooms and other buildings belonging to the government are constructed on hygienic principles, and that the employees are all vaccinated and keep their bowels open. In a similar bill that was introduced to the Senate, last winter, as a feeler, several other duties were assigned to this bureau; but I have not the bill at hand, and forget what they were. I do remember, though, that the way was left open for the future creation of several brigades of office-holders in each State.

It is also in the programme to endeavor to pass Hoar's "Bill for the Establishment of a National System of Education" so amended that it will give

in most of the Southern States.—Hoar, who is an honest, straightforward man, and by far the ablest member of the Massachusetts delegation, tried hard to get his bill favorably considered by the 41st and 42d Congresses, and will be indignant at any attempt by professed political friends to mangle it for personal or party purposes; but if the third term men, most of whom have hitherto opposed or dodged it, find that they can trade it through, amended to suit them, they will care little for his wishes in regard to it.

A National Quarantine System.

is another contemplated measure of the third term men for swelling the number of federal officials. At present, each State enacts its own quarantine laws. It will be readily perceived that the number of health officers and other employees necessary to enforce these laws in the several seaboard cities of the Union is, collectively, very large, and would add much to the numerical strength of the administration that appointed them.

I have endeavored to outline the programme of the third term men, and to help to defeat it by making it known thus early. The obstacles they will have to encounter, and their chances of success, I shall reserve for another letter.

Likely To Come Back.

A friend who left Kansas five days ago, has just entered my office, and corroborates the current rumor that Pomeroy will most probably be the Republican candidate for the U. S. Senate. Apart from his Grant proclivities, which are strong, he is by all odds the best man thus far spoken of in connection with the much coveted seat. Send him along.

An Awful Tragedy.

BAKER CITY, Ogn., June 8th, 1873.

Mr. EDITOR:—On looking over a paper not long since I noticed a description of one of the greatest luxuries of "domestic bliss." Says the writer: "Putting up a stove is not so difficult in itself. It is the pipe that raises four fifths of the mischief and all the dust."

I agree with the writer in regard to the "pipe" question and can say from experience that it is about as tiresome business as ever was undertaken.

About eight miles east of this town, There is a place, very fine, Which is called and generally known As the Virtue Gold Mine.

It was at this place that I procured a situation, last Summer, as Bucket Tender, and had also attached to my office the Conductorship and Engineer of the Lightning Express train.

My principal office of business was at the Hoisting Works, just over the main shaft, five hundred feet into a hill, three or four hundred feet from its summit. My principal freight was slate rock and quartz, occasionally a load of wood for the engine, not the engine of the train for its engine did not require wood to keep it in motion, but the engine at the Hoisting Works.

I conducted this train for four or five months, and did not have but one or two very fearful disasters.—The first one night about 2 o'clock, little dreaming of an accident, I had no head light on my train, the night was very dark with quite a number of black clouds floating overhead; but there was little need of a light as I had good breaks on, and my engine was one that could be reversed in a second.

From the time I left the mouth of the tunnel I knew I was nearing the station where my freight was to be discharged, generally known as the slate rock station, but the intense darkness prevented me from seeing exactly where I was to stop. I was going very slow about the rate of fifty yards to the hour. There had been a cross tie on the track but, by accident, it was removed. And the consequences was that the front end of my train went down and back end end flew up and away it went down a grade, almost perpendicular, of about seventy-five feet. Leaving the engine, conductor, &c., just upon the brink who read the history of Oregon to it as it went tumbling down the grade of very irregular rocks from the size of your fist to the size of a barrel. The Lightning Express did not run any more that night, and at six o'clock I retired to my "little bed," and the great disaster of the night was forgotten.

From thence it seemed as if misfortune as a conductor, engineer, Breaksmen &c., had just begun.—The next night everything went splendid until about 4 o'clock.—About the time every one about the mine was dead asleep, my train ran off the track and it was with difficulty that I got straight on again; and twice more did it get off before six o'clock. So I came to the conclusion that it was running rather slow and would run a little faster. So just before I got to the place I was in the habit of running off the track, I started it with the utmost speed of my engine. I got to that spot and didn't run off but my ear gave a sudden jump and flipped over bottom side up.

Now this was aggravating. But I took it very cool. Leisurely seated myself and spoke to it. I don't think it worth the while to give you them but leave you guess the words by imagining yourself in my place.

It was six o'clock, and after eating breakfast I was soon asleep, and disturbed only once by dreams of the mishaps of the night and awakened once by the exclamation of "Oh! What a willin I am!"

Indeed, sir, I had forgotten the stove pipe subject, but we did take down the pipe [smokestack] of the engine, about fifty feet in length and a terrible time. The "stove pipe" description cannot be compared with it. And some of these days I may tell you all about it; but at present I will bid you adieu.

Yours, &c.,

NAPOLÉON BONAPARTE.

WASHINGTON CITY, June 7.—Attorney-General Williams has made public his opinion on the question of the disposition to be made of the Modocs. It reminds them to the action of General Davis. Their chief offense cited is the assassination of bearers of flags of truce—a crime which has heretofore received punishment of death.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—The President and Secretary of war have already been informed of the opinion of Attorney General Williams, that such of the Modocs as are charged with the offenses against the recognized laws of war may be tried and punished by a military commission, and the War Department will, in accordance with this opinion, send instructions to Gen. Davis through Gen. Schofield. There is no doubt that a commission will be organized without delay, and a trial commenced according to army regulations. As the proceedings and findings in a Military Commission, where the sentence is death, are transmitted to Washington for the approval of the President before sentence can be carried into effect, several weeks must unavoidably pass before the punishment of the Modocs takes place.

The examination by the naval authorities of Captain Tyson and Sergeant Myers of the Polar expedition yesterday lasted eight hours. It elicited nothing not already published, but tends strongly to the conclusion that Capt. Hall died a natural death.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—The Post-office Department has concluded to send a special agent to the various Territories to inspect the stage routes prior to letting the mail contracts on the 1st of September next. The Department is under the impression that there is considerable swindling both as to the length of the routes claimed, and frequency with which the mails are delivered, and it is proposed to stop this sort of thing if possible.

A Dutchman, in describing a span of horses which he had lost, said:—"Dey were very mooch alike, 'specially the off one. One lookt so mooch like poth I could not tell der from which; when I went after one I always caught de oder; and I whipped de one most dead because de oder kicked at me."

The sales of sewing machines during the year reach the enormous figure of 851,736. Nearly a million sewing machines purchased in a single year! These remarkable facts show how literally, how generally the sewing machine has become a household necessity.

Two urchins, five or six years old returning from school recently, were discussing great theological questions. "Well," says urchin No. 1, "The Lord owns all this world,—don't he?" "Yaas, I spose he does," responded No. 2, "but did says the devil's got a big morgidge on it."

A Pennsylvania Congressman is credited with saying that he will pay all his debts with his back pay, thus placing it where it will do the most good.
