

BY L. H. WELLS.

Death is a solemn thing. It is an epoch which must occur in the life of every individual, high or low, rich or poor.

Death is the separation of the spiritual from the temporal when applied to the human family; but when applied to all other works of nature, it is only the changing of one form to that of another.

There is great glory in dying for a cause or while battling for liberty and justice. History furnishes many instances when death was met with heroism, and we will mention one or two illustrative of the theme:

Palaski, a Polish nobleman, entered the American Revolution and died bravely while aiding the colonists.— Wolfe illustrated death upon the battlefield when he fell mortally wounded while storming Quebec.

Soon after he was wounded he heard the cry, "They fly! They fly!" "Who fly?" said Wolfe. "The enemy," responded his attendant. "Then I die content!" Let your mind wander back over the history of Catholicism to the time when the Walden church was first established in Italy, or the time when the Reformation was cradling its infancy in Germany.

Waldron's Dramatic Troupe broke up at Silver City, Idaho, and he had to sell some of his wife's jewelry to get money to go to Denver, Colorado. Crosbie, Vinson and the rest of the Troupe went to Winnemucca.

"Who dares to spit tobacco juice on the car floor?" savagely asked a burly passenger on a Rock Island train. "I dare," quietly replied a slender youth, sniting the action to the word. "You're the chap I'm looking for," said the ruffian, "give me a chew."

"Susie," said the teacher to one of her pupils, "You shouldn't make faces. You will grow up homely if you make faces."

Susie looked thoughtfully in the teacher's face a moment, and then innocently asked: "Did you make faces when you was a little girl?"

Bad reasoning for a Jury with regard to a prisoner—Put yourself in his place. How to arrive at the height of a church steeple on a hot day—Periscope.

It is bad enough to be pug nosed without being called pugnacious.
