THAT "TIDAL WAVE."

The following article we take from Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper. It portrays the political situation so truthfully that we cannot do better than give the whole article to our readers. The people in the East as well as in the South and West, are becoming alarmed at the rapid strides that are being made by the Grant Administration towards a centralized government, and the leading papers of the East are now sounding the notes of alarm, as the following article will fully show:

"The returns from Connecticut show clearly enough that the elections of last Autumn were no mere spasmodic demonstrations of popular discontent or temporary local feeling, but proofs of a deliberate determination on the part of the people to overthrow the present administration of national affairs. The Republicans might well have hoped to achieve a victory. They had the prestige of a quasi-success in New Hampshire; they had plenty of money; their most popular speakers were enlisted for the canvass; their interests in the issue were vital. The Democrats, on the other hand, were notoriously unprovided with the sinews of war, and went into the contest with nothing but their principles to sustain them. That these principles triumphed against ample means and governmental influence is a clear proof that the popular sentiment is decisively adverse to Grantism and so-called Republicanism. Even Gen. Hawley, the only man on the ticket who did not indorse each and every act of Ulysses, was indignantly defeated. The so much talked of "tidal wave" was no sporadic freak of the ocean, but the charging vanguard of a victorious element. The victory in Connecticut is a substantial and prophetic achievement. It will give heart to the patriots of other States, and foreshadows a national triumph. Citizens of other States have only to emulate the wise administration of affairs inaugurated by the people of Connecticut to win popular confidence and to rally to their banners all those who are sick and ashamed of the condition into which the affairs of our noble republic have sunk under the weight of the party which has bribed and cheated and crawled its way into power.

"The struggle for the overthrow of existing tyranny and misfeasance comes at an opportune moment. The approaching Centennial revives all the memories of a glorious and stainless past. The record of the Revolutionary struggle will be read again and again by the third generation from its inception; and the contrast between the past and present cannot but be appreciated at its full value. We shall see, by the rekindled light, that the wrongs perpetrated by the Ministry of George III, were trifles in comparison with the consummated outrages of American citizens we have trusted, loaded with favors, and raised to power. We shall be led to institute a comparison between Washington and Grant—between the man who might have retained power for his lifetime and scorned to avail himself of his personal popularity to become a perpetual Dictator, and the man who, tried in the balance and found wanting, is still straining every nerve and employing every corrupt means to obtain a third nomination, which might lead to a virtual overthrow of republican institutions on this continent.

"But such voices as now come to us from Connecticut assure us that the republic must and will be preserved, and that the American people are prepared to repudiate with scorn the theory that, out of a population of forty millions, there is only one man capable of conducting the Government as its Executive. This doctrine, however disguised, is nothing but the expression of autocracy. It is Caesarism pure and simple. Let but this doctrine be successively asserted, and the best we can hope for in the future is the fact of imperialism with the form of a republic. But, in the event hinted at, "Caesar with a Senate at his heels," would hardly be content with a "de facto" triumph over republican principles. The insatiable empire would hardly be dispensed with, and the visible throne and purple, a vulgar and venal nobility, titles, stars and garters, would not be long in adding to the pomp, pride and circumstances of triumphant usurpation."

EASTERN OREGON FAIR.

Below we copy an article from the La Grande Sentinel in relation to an Eastern Oregon Fair. We think the suggestions made by the Sentinel are good and should be acted upon by the farmers and stock raisers of Baker County, as well as in all other portions of Eastern Oregon. The Union County Agricultural Society has as fine and convenient Fair Ground as can be found in the State. Their Race Track is as good as any other on the coast. They invite the people of Eastern Oregon to unite with them in getting up a good Fair sometime this Fall, with the assurance on their part that those attending at the Union Fair Grounds from other counties will be placed on the same footing as citizens of Union County. This is a matter that our farmers are deeply interested in and we think they will find it to their interest to fall in with and act upon the suggestions made in the Sentinel article. The Sentinel says, we have been requested by numerous and influential citizens of Union and Baker County, to call the attention of the people of Eastern Oregon and Washington Territory to the subject of organizing an Annual Fair for the people of said district.

"The interests of this locality are almost entirely separated and distinct in any and every way from Western Oregon. Our seasons are so late that we cannot exhibit the products of this country at the State Fair held at Salem. When the agricultural products of the Willamette valley have ripened and matured, ours are not sufficiently developed to compare favorably with them. It is at least 350 miles from here to Salem, ninety miles of which has to be made overland. The time necessarily consumed is sufficient to destroy any kind of vegetable products that the people of this section of "sagebrush and sand" might desire to place on exhibition, in order to call attention to the products of Eastern Oregon. The distance is so great that no stock can be taken from here in condition to compete with stock of like character from the Willamette valley, without an immense outlay of time and money. People from East of the mountains have yearly visited the State Fair at Salem in great numbers, and each time have come away convinced that the main object is to gather in the surplus loose change that people from this section usually put in circulation when they take a trip for pleasure. The O. S. N. Co., the hotels and railroads all reap a rich harvest, and pronounce the State Fair a "big thing," while the wandering sight seer returns in disgust, usually from one hundred to one hundred and fifty dollars out, and pronounces it a humbug."

"The people of Eastern Oregon have entered, of late years, largely into the breeding and importing of fine stock. They have cattle, horses, sheep, hogs, and poultry that will compare favorably with any on the Pacific Coast. They desire to meet together and exhibit their stock and agricultural products, and compare notes and learn from each other the valuable experiences and lessons of the past. In order to do so it becomes necessary to concentrate and select some place nearer home than Salem."

"The people of Union County have went to work with a will and completed a Fair Ground which far exceeds anything in this State. The actual improvements have cost over four thousand dollars; the race track is the best north of San Francisco; they have ample room for stock of all kinds. The two Fairs heretofore held in this county, have been conducted with such fairness and impartiality as to attract the attention of the numerous visitors who have been in attendance. The locality is a central one for all the settled country East of the Cascades. Persons from Wasco, Grant, Umatilla, Union, Baker and Walla Walla, can meet here and hold a Fair at a very trifling expense, compared to making a trip to Salem. They will thus keep many thousands of dollars in Eastern Oregon, where they "need it in their business."

"The stock holders of the Union County Agricultural Society are willing to dispose of stock to citizens of any of the adjoining counties, at just what it has cost on the dollar to make the improvements that have been erected, or they are willing to furnish the grounds and cordially invite the neighboring counties to meet with them, and all exhibit on the same footing and without any distinction as to locality. Last year the Union County Agricultural Society paid out about $1,700 in premiums. If it was known that the people of all the counties East of the Cascades would heartily join in holding a consolidated Fair, the list of purses and premiums would be materially enlarged, and inducements would be offered to our neighbors of Western Oregon, or any other locality, to come forward and compete for the prizes."

"We think we can say, without boasting, that we have in Eastern Oregon, horses that will go against anything that can be brought from any part of the Pacific Coast, and men who will back them in a substantial and interesting manner; nor do we refer to one or two. We have swift runners, fast trotters and strong pullers. We live in a stock country and have the stock to prove it. We also desire to place the time of holding the Fair so as not to conflict with the State Fair if possible, and if such a time could be agreed upon, would very respectfully invite our Western Oregon neighbors, whom we have visited so often, to come and see us. We have a house now and are anxious to entertain them. We hope the papers of Eastern Oregon and Washington Territory will lay this matter before their readers, and invite any correspondence on the subject to be directed to W. J. Snodgrass, Secretary of the Union County Agricultural Society, Oro Dell."

The Editor of the DEMOCRAT is recovering from his late severe illness and is able to be around, but we must confess that we do not yet feel in the mood to write long and bitter editorials yet, but hope soon to get down to our regular work, then look out for breakers. There are several subjects of interest to the tax-payers of our county that we intend to ventilate.

We are waiting for new type which we have on the way from Umatilla, before we commence the publication of the black list. Those in arrears, who do not wish their names to appear in this list must settle within the next two weeks, or during court. We are pushed for money and those who owe us MUST PAY UP.
