EASTERN OREGON MINES.

Within the past few days we have been talking with some old mining prospectors, and they tell us what we have always thought was the facts in relation to this portion of Oregon. They say this is the best field for profitable prospecting for quartz and other minerals that can be found on the Pacific Coast; that they can find plenty of good ledges and mines, but they have not the capital to open them, so it is no use for them to locate claims only as far as they are able to do the work on them to hold them. One of them said to us, "If some good old California prospectors would only come in here and take up some ledges he could show them, and let their backers in San Francisco know the facts in relation to this country, there would be plenty of capital here in a short time to develop mines as fast as they were discovered, and then we would have glorious and prosperous times here." We agree with our friend, and believe as he does, that if the capitalists of San Francisco or the East were convinced of the fact that our mines are as rich as we think and know them to be, it would be but a short time until we would have plenty of capital here to open and develop the hidden wealth of our mountains.

There is, as our prospecting friends say, a vast extent of country in Baker and Grant Counties where a pick has never yet been struck, and a great portion that has been prospected has only been skimmed over, and no thorough search has ever been made for ledges that have not made their appearance distinct and plain on the surface of the ground, and not more than one out of twenty, thus discovered, has been went down upon deep enough to enable a good judge to tell whether there was anything there or not that would pay to work. As a general thing the men who discover these ledges have not the means to prospect them, and are letting them lay hoping something may turn up whereby they may be able to realize something for their discovery.

We want capital here that will back the reliable prospector—we want prospectors in whom the capitalists have confidence, and, if they are not among us now, there is room here for them, and when they do come, and make their reports to capitalists who have faith in their discoveries, then our country will indeed, we think, show its vast richness. Our miners and prospectors should be careful and not overrate the extent and richness of our ledges or mines. Do not try to mislead strangers, the truth is good enough. Ask them to look and test the ledges and mines for themselves, and when they find that our ledges and mines will compare favorably with any on the Pacific Coast they will believe it, for the old saying is "that seeing is convincing," and persons must believe in what they see for themselves.

THE PORTLAND, DALLES AND SALT LAKE RAILROAD.

COMMUNICATION FROM COL. W. W. CHAPMAN.

OFFICE P. D. & S. L. R. R. Co., PORTLAND, June 10, 1875.

By late advices we are informed that our contracts for the construction of the Portland, Dalles and Salt Lake Railroad have been received in London and considered, and the following modifications proposed, to-wit: That we, instead of the contractors, locate and furnish estimates in detail for 200 miles of the road. Upon this being done the contracts will be signed for the construction of the whole line as fast as estimates shall be made and approved. The 200 miles above referred to will reach from Portland to the town of Umatilla, and in connection with surveys and estimates made by Mr. Blair, our engineer, will reach to La Grande, east of the Blue mountains, including the Walla Walla branch. It is the intention, if funds for that purpose are supplied, to extend the preliminary line and estimates from La Grande to Baker City this fall. This is desirable in order to facilitate obtaining the right of way and at an early day putting the work under construction. It is proper here to state that after deliberation, and upon advising with some prominent citizens as to the probability of sufficient stock being taken here to carry the modifications into effect. We have accepted the modifications and caused notice thereof to be transmitted to the proper parties. It only remains, therefore, for a compliance on our part, and all will be right, and the great enterprise of the Pacific Northwest a success.

Correspondence.

Letter from our agent in New York: New York, May 6, 1875.

COL. W. W. CHAPMAN—Dear Sir: I am only just this day in receipt of news from the contract. It is not signed, nor is it rejected. They say they are in earnest about building the road, and have the means at their command, all of which is hopeful. But they say they will require some modifications; but do not give them in this letter. I shall expect another letter from them very soon. The attorney for the contractors is sanguine that an agreement will be arrived at. I remain yours, etc.

Letter from the same party: New York, May 20, 1875.

W. W. CHAPMAN, Esq.—Dear Sir: I am in receipt of news from London to the effect that the proposed syndicate of contractors will not sign a contract with us until we have furnished them with estimates of the cost of constructing at least one section. I send herewith copies of the letter of the contractors, as represented by Mr. B. [one of the syndicate] to Mr. J. their counselor-at-law, also of the latter's last letter to me, which explains the exact position of the matter up to this date. Now, if you can comply, all right. I may also state that Mr. B. has expressed his intention of coming over here in June; and Mr. J., their counselor, will probably accompany him. I am very glad they are coming over here, as then we can treat more direct and expeditiously. Yours, etc.

Copy of letter from Mr. B. to H. D. J., (their counselor.)

London, April 29th, 1875.

Dear Sir: The Portland, Dalles and Salt Lake Railroad—

1st. We require detailed estimates over such a length of land as the syndicate would after approval be bound to build.

2d. The right of constructing the railway so far as such estimates extend, and the remainder after the estimates have been submitted and approved by them. Of course the first thing to be done is to have the estimates carefully prepared and this I trust you will impress carefully upon your friends on the other side. Yours truly &c.

Copy of letter from H. D. J., Esq., to our agent in New York, dated May 1, 1875:

Dear Sir: I wrote you last on the 28th ult., and have since received from Mr. E. W. B. a letter in ref. to the P. D. and Salt Lake Railroad. I know some of the men on the syndicate, whose names you are likewise familiar with, and can only add that if the American side will work with us, the men are powerful enough to build the line. What they want here are estimates, say 200 miles, from which they would make a firm contract with the company on approval of the estimates to construct the remainder. This will give them time to survey the remainder. The men appear fully in earnest, but they say, "We want to take up the whole business, and three millions sterling (fifteen million dollars) is, in England, always a serious matter."

That the public may understand the reason for these modifications it is proper to remark that the contract as originally drawn in London, and sanctioned by us, provided that the contractors should survey and estimate the cost of construction, and if it did not exceed an average of $30,000 per mile for the whole line, then the contract should be carried into effect; if it did exceed that sum, then it should be optional with them. But they have, as we are advised, taken the wisest course for them and safer course for us, to require the surveys and estimates to be made by us. We are safe in assuring that the average cost of our road will not exceed $30,000 per mile, even at the former prices for iron, while it is now found to be one-third to one-half cheaper.

Having accepted the proposed modifications, we have engaged the services of Mr. Thielsen as chief engineer, to take charge of the survey and make the estimates. His signature will be a sufficient guaranty of the integrity of the work. He puts the cost of making the surveys and estimates at $6,000. If this sum shall be promptly subscribed, the contracts may be finally closed by the 1st of August and the work commenced in September or October next.

With the history of this enterprise and its importance to the country the public must be familiar. Four years have been spent in constant, persistent effort for Congressional aid. In this we failed. The day had passed for such legislation. But warned of these possible results we, in the meantime, steadily progressed with these negotiations to a point where the final result depends today not alone upon the patriotism and public spirit of our citizens. With much respect, W. W. CHAPMAN, President.

LATE NEWS.

A Letter From Missouri. The Oregon City Enterprise says, the following letter written by Elisha A. Moore, of Liberty, Clay county, Missouri, under date of May 28th, to a citizen in this county, has been handed to us for publication. It presents a sad aspect for the future of that county:

I thought I would write and let you know how times are here. It is the worst prospect I ever saw in my life. The grasshoppers are eating everything that they come to. They are as thick as hail here now. They have eaten nearly all the wheat, oats and rye and commenced on the corn. I don't know that we will raise any thing this year. Every thing is scarce and high. Corn is worth $1.25 per bushel; wheat $1.40 per bushel; flour, $4 per hundred; bacon, 15 cents per pound. A man can't get work at any price. All the farmers have discharged their hands on account of the grasshoppers. I expect we will all have to leave here this fall. We want you to write how times are in Oregon and the prices of produce. I think we will come out there this fall if the grasshoppers don't leave soon. There are lots of people leaving Kansas now. The people in Jackson and Cass are driving their cattle to Iowa for grass. The hoppers have eaten all the grass here. There are lots of people suffering for something to eat here now. Bates county has petitioned to Kansas City for help. They were starving. Men there took their guns and went to the towns and told the merchants that they were out of everything to eat and out of money and that they had to have some provisions. They would not sell on a credit, and so they took it by force of arms. I am afraid that this will be the case here. We may raise corn yet, if they leave soon, but that is all. It is too late to raise anything else. Write soon and give us the prices of horses and cattle.

Dr. Bluderman, Director of the U. S. Mint, is authoritatively of the opinion that the plan of substituting silver coin for paper fractional currency is practicable, and further, he believes the condition of the silver market is such that there is an adequate supply and will be available. It is intimated that upon these theories Secretary Bristow is already active in the withdrawal of fractional currency, proposing to make a scarcity of paper fractional currency before he puts the silver in circulation, and in proof of this reference is made to the April debt statement, which shows a reduction of $25,000 in the amount of fractional currency outstanding, and to the May statement, which shows a further reduction of $238,644.
