THE RAILROAD.

Last week we published the correspondence between Col. Chapman and the English Capitalists, and this week we publish a letter from the Col. in relation to the same subject. The news contained in these articles are meagre, but taken altogether we conceive it is rather favorable. We have no doubt but what the people of Portland and Wasco and Umatilla Counties will raise the funds necessary to make the survey and estimates necessary, and as required by the English Company, and all competent judges say that the cost of the building of the road, including the rolling stock necessary for complete running order, will not exceed $30,000 per mile, and if this should prove to be the case by the survey ordered made, there can be no doubt but what work will be commenced on the road at an early day. When the survey is completed to Umatilla, and accepted, then the citizens east at that point will be called upon to do their part to make the survey and estimates to Baker City. We hope and believe that our citizens will contribute their quota in aid of this much desired and greatly needed work. They are not asked to give as a donation but will receive their certificates for what they contribute, and the amount will be returned to them in in stock or other equivalents, besides, they will be repaid in ten fold by the increase of their property and the price of everything they may raise for market, and when the road is in course of construction and after it is completed they will receive cash down for everything they may have to sell. The Colonel deserves great credit for the untiring energy he has displayed in the matter of bringing this great work to a successful point and now, as heretofore, our people should aid him. Let us all do our duty.

THE LAST TREASURY ROBBED.

The New York Sun of June 8th, says: While a great many theories have been conveniently set up at Washington about the mysterious disappearance of a package containing ninety-five $500 bills, and intended for the Park Bank of this city, the bottom fact remains that the money was stolen from the cash room of the Treasurer of the United States, and that the theft rests among six employers who occupied it.

This and other packages were put up on last Wednesday morning, and passed through the usual routine before 10 o'clock. No discovery was made until near 3 o'clock that day, when the packages were checked off to be delivered to the Adams Express. So that five hours had elapsed before the department had any knowledge of the robbery, or could take steps to investigate it.

The parcel was small enough to be easily concealed about the person, and the thief had abundant time to carry it off without attracting the least attention, especially if he was familiar with the habits of the office, as is now generally believed. With these advantages, it is not surprising that the Treasury magnates and their wonderful detectives have not yet struck the trail of this robbery.

Large as the loss is, it will be more compensated if a thorough overhauling of the Treasury is a result of the present sensation. Mr. Spinner's office has been robbed more than once before of tens of thousands of dollars by clerks holding the closets personal and official relations with him. And it is notorious that the banks have been fleeced through that office, by pretended deficiencies in packages of currency sent for redemption, which had been tested and verified so as to prevent any possibility of mistake. In no instance was an excess ever known to be reported. There was no remedy against the Treasury count, and these losses had to be borne.

In 1873, bills of the denomination of $500, aggregating a tenth part of the whole circulation of greenbacks, were called in on the plea of successful counterfeiting, which could only be detected by Treasury experts. The whole power of deciding between the genuine and counterfeit notes was thus confined to a few experts, who, if venal, might discredit the genuine in order to conceal an over-issue, or to create a panic in the money market.

When the rival Rings were contending for the printing of the notes last winter, the department maintained that counterfeiting was impossible on account of the fibrous paper used, which was the exclusive property of the Government. In answer to that official assertion, one of the companies produced a hundred sheets of this identical paper, and it was shown that the bills of $500 denomination which had been condemned as spurious were printed upon it.

Congress has on various occasions indemnified Mr. Spinner and other public officers for the thievery of their subordinates, so that the bonds given to protect the Treasury against such losses have escaped the penalties and saddle the burden on the taxpayers. As a necessary consequence of this laxity, crime has been encouraged, the system of accountability has been loosened, and enormous sums have been stolen.

This experience makes it indispensable that the count of public money in the Treasury vaults, which must take place when the new Treasurer comes in, should be rigid, thorough, and open, instead of being formal careless, and secret, as has been practice. Who knows how many counterfeits are hidden among the packages endorsed as containing a given number of thousands?

Strong suspicions exist in the public mind of deficits, false reckoning, and spurious issues. They may be wholly unfounded or partially true. It is only proper, therefore, after the developments already made, and the corruption which has been brought to light in the Navy, Interior, War, Treasury, Justice, and Post Office Departments, that examination of the people's treasure should be searching in every respect.

The present robbery shows by startling example how easy it is to steal in broad day, during office hours, in a confined room from which the public is shut out, and right under the eyes of the chosen custodians of the Treasury. Packages containing large sums of money have heretofore disappeared, and defalcations of which the public know little have been numerous. Hence no safeguard can be too severe.

Grantism is doomed, and its supporters will of course make the best of their opportunities during the next twenty-one months, not only in sterling, but in endeavors to conceal their rascality. The Navy Department was fired four times in a few weeks, and we are prepared to hear of other attempts to burn ugly records and to destroy proofs which will be needed by the House of Representatives next winter.

FREIGHT ON THE COLUMBIA.

At the meeting, a short time since, the representatives of the different Granges of Eastern Oregon, Washington and Idaho, sought and obtained an interview with Messrs. Ainsworth, Thompson, Reed and Brazee, of the O. S. N. Co., with a view to coming to some understanding in relation to freights by way of the Columbia River. The Grangers set forth their demand in the following order:

1. We desire the cheapest possible freights up and down the Columbia river, without discrimination for or against any point.

2. We desire to have our products carried direct to Astoria, so that they can be shipped at the least possible cost; and cannot see why we should be required to pay for freighting 12 miles up the Willamette and 12 miles down again, all out of the direct line of transportation.

3. We feel that we are overcharged on our freights up the Columbia river, and more especially on agricultural implements and farming machinery.

4. Speaking for the settlers in the upper country, we say that we have been and are now dependent upon the O. S. N. Co., for carrying our freights to and from the country, and we feel that the rates heretofore and now charged are too high and a burden upon the country. We further represent that under this burden the country has come to a stand still; and in fact is loosing in population and capital.

To each and all of these queries, as above propounded, Capt. Ainsworth, speaking for the O. S. N. Co., returned favorable answers. Generally the interview between the steamboat gentlemen and the Grangers was pleasant, and the parties separated in excellent humor and well pleased with each other

OHIO DEMOCRACY.

A special dispatch from Columbus of June 17th says the Democratic State Convention to-day was the largest ever held in Ohio. The following ticket was nominated: For Governor, Wm. Allen; Lieut. Governor, S. F. Carey; Supreme Judge, I. O. Ashburn; Auditor, E. M. Green; Treasurer, J. Schriver; Attorney General, T. E. Powell. The following platform was adopted: Sacred adherence to the principles of the Government put in practical operation by the fathers of the Republic; protection of all citizens, without regard to race or color; that the President's service should be limited to one term, at a salary of $25,000 per year; retrenchment in every department of government; no grants of land or money to railroad, steamship or other companies; preservation of the public land for actual settlers; that the volume of currency be made and kept equal to the wants of trade; that national bank circulation be permanently retired and legal tenders issued in their place; establishment of a system of free banks of discount and deposits; denounce the Republican platform as an insult to the intelligent people of Ohio, and a base appeal to sectarian prejudices.

A Poet's Idea of California.

Bayard Taylor, the great traveler, poet and writer, speaks of California and her children as follows: "The children of California are certainly a great improvement upon those not born among us. Nowhere can more rosy specimens of health and beauty be found. Strong-limbed, red-blooded, graceful, and as full of happy, animal life as young fawns, they bid fair to develop into admirable types of manhood and womanhood. To them, loving their native soil with no acquired love, knowing no associations that are not linked with its blue skies and yellow hills, we must look for its proper inhabitants, who will retain all that is vigorous, earnest and generous in the present race, rejecting all that is coarse and mean. For myself, in breathing an air sweeter than that which first caught the honeyed words of Plato—in looking upon lovelier vales than those of Tempe and Eurotas—in wandering through a land whose sentinel peak of Shasta far overtops the Olympian throne of Jupiter—I could not but feel that nature must be false to her promise, or man is not the splendid creature he once was, if the art, the literature and philosophy of ancient Greece are not one day rivaled on this last of inhabited shores."

Tampering With The Judge.

A cattle dealer arrived in Paris with the intention of having his portrait painted in oils. He applied to an artist near the Madeleine, and, in concluding the bargain, dwelt strongly on his wish that the likeness should be striking and unmistable. The painter promised that it should be so. "Indeed," he added, "I will appeal to the most disinterested judge possible—to your own bull-dog; we will show him the picture, and see if he recognizes you." Accordingly, when the picture was finished, it was brought into the dealer's lodging, placed on the floor, and the dog was called in. He instantly ran up to the portrait and began to lick it, wagging his tail and showing every sign of delighted affection. The grateful dealer, convinced of the accuracy of the likeness, paid down the sum demanded by the artist, quite unconscious of the fact that the "counterfeit presentment" of his manly features had been well rubbed with a bit of bacon.

'Tis the first spring mosquito
Heard humming alone,
His thirsty companions
Will be here anon.

OUR ELDORADO LETTER.

ELDORADO, June 19th, 1875.

The Water.

EDITOR DEMOCRAT:—A break in the vicinity of Long Creek, on the line of the Burnt River Ditch, occurred on Sunday last, causing the temporary suspension of a full head of water for a few days—the water will probably be in camp, however, to-morrow. The Ditch has been thoroughly cleaned out its entire length this season, and is now in splendid condition, and, though the work has delayed the water three weeks later than anticipated, it will result beneficially to both ditch owners and miners, as it will give a longer run of water in the fall season, and will be less liable to breakages from ice-jams. Ever since the occupancy of the Garden of Eden by Mr. & Mrs. Adams, there have been growlers and grumblers on the sphere we inhabit, and probably will continue to be to an indefinite period. We do not feel disposed to censure the Ditch owners for unavoidable accidents that have occurred and may occur again. Neither do we find any fault with the Directors of the work on the Ditch, or the workmen, from the fact that we know that the man who directs the whole work and has the management of the Ditch, (to use an old saying) has forgotten more about Ditches and Ditching, and everything appertaining thereto, than all of the malcontents combined, (who are thirsting for water, but would rather have whiskey), ever knew or ever will know. It is for the especial benefit of the growlers that we make the above casual remarks. Six pipes were running on Quartz Gulch before the break, and a dozen more will operate as soon as the water arrives. The Amelia boys are waiting patiently for water, but are happy, and so is everybody except the growlers.

The Coming Tornado.

Since the adjournment of the last inadequate, inefficient, undesirable, and thieving Congress, and while Mr. Grant and suite have been attending small centennials, and loafing around race-courses, stables, cock-pits and dog-kennels, Mr. Bristow and his vigilant assistants, have been turning things upside down in the kitchen Cabinet. Secor Robeson has been detected in smuggling Government land into spurious sale. Delano & Son are both caught speculating feloniously in Wyoming and in the Santa Barbara Mountains. Distillers and operators in whiskey, custom-house officials and Revenue agents combined, are now trembling in their boots, and are afraid that they will not reap the rich harvest intended to be divided between them and their patrons, members of the last Congress, under whose patronage they hold their positions, and whom they assist to rob the people. Mr. Grant did not know Mr. Bristow when he appointed him as a member of his Cabinet, or else knowing Bristow's honesty, integrity and ability, he selected him to swamp what is left of the Republican Party—and if the letter was Grant's intention, he has succeeded admirably. The breeze that is now blowing will increase to a gale on the meeting of the next Congress that will culminate in a Tornado that will sweep the length and breadth of the land in '76, and shake the capitol of the nation from dome to base.

STATES RIGHTS.

OUR PARKERSVILLE LETTER.

PARKERSVILLE, June 17th, 1875.

EDITOR DEMOCRAT:—i wuz a komikal kuss, that iz when i wuz yung; when at skool i cud have all the skolars a lafin at onst; my teacher sed I wuz just kalkulated tu act the fule, he alsow sed i wuz tu meen for any kommon use, and he konkluded to cool the seet ov my britches with a klab-bored, now i think he did very rong, i thot so at the time, but he wuz the biggest and he got me forked-end-up-down akrost hiz ne and i hed tu take the konsequenses. i never wuz brite at skool xcept in spelin and komposishun. i maid unakountable progres in these, but i did not meen tu give yu a ful akount ov myself at onst, but will klose by saying that at present i am in that lukonsin posture whitch my name indikates i shud be. FORKED-END-DOWN.

NEW YORK, June 15.—It is rumored that the Vanderbilt railroad companies and the Chicago and Northwestern, being dissatisfied with Jay Gould's course in the Union Pacific, are proposing to take up and complete the Northern Pacific Railroad.

Another rumor is that Gould, failing to bring the Central Pacific to his demands, threatens to construct the proposed road from Ogden to the Columbia river, and so obtain independent connection with the Pacific. The efforts to market the Central Pacific stock at remunerative prices are positively unavailing. The sales reported are not genuine.

DUBLIN, June 18—Midnight.—A fire broke out to-night in the excise bond stores, which contained 1,800 puncheons of whisky. There were several tremendous explosions, and the flames spread rapidly to the adjoining buildings. Burning casks of liquor are flowing into the streets; the fire spreads rapidly; from fifteen to twenty buildings in Ardee, Mill and Chamber streets are in flames. Vast crowds surround the burning districts. A mob rolled several barrels of whisky out of stores, helping themselves to the contents. The police are mustering in force. Troops have been ordered out to preserve order.

1 o'clock A. M.—The fire is unabated; destruction very great.

DUBLIN, June 19—2 A. M.—At this time the fire is burning as fiercely as ever. The liquor carries the flames in every direction. Water is of no avail. It only causes the burning liquor to spread. The fire brigade tore up the pavements and attempted to smother the fire in the streets with sand, but they have only succeeded in isolating it. The crowds are collecting floating whisky in pails, dippers and hats. Loss estimated at £500,000.

At a school examination a clergyman made a brief address to the pupils on the necessity of obeying their teachers and obeying their teachers and growing up loyal and useful citizens. To emphasize his remarks he pointed to a large national flag spread on one side of the room, and inquired: "Boys, what is that flag for?" A little urchin, who understood the condition of the house better than the speaker, promptly answerd, "To hide the dirt, sir."

At a recent picnic party of solid Washington merchants some one proposed the health of Boss Shepherd, who was an invited guest. The toast was greeted with "loud and continuous hisses," and speeches of protest. For a time it was feared that the party would be broken up. Finally, however, Mr. Shepherd's admirers were allowed to pledge him. The incident has naturally made talk.

A young man in a music shop was lately overpowered by a fastidious young lady, who wanted to puchase "Mr. Hood's—a—song of the—a—gentleman's undergarment!" The young man is still alive.
