

STOP MY PAPER!

The Pacific Churchman says: "What a shock hungry, care-worn printers and publishers receive, as, with startled eyes, they gaze upon the above impressive message for the first time! Starvation, disfigurement, and a paper's burial, like a banquet, loom up before their vision; and, in their agony, they would flee to the offended mortal and cry for pardon, if not for themselves, at least for wife, children, parents and other dependents upon their support."

"Upon second thought they try to console themselves by an accurate calculation of the loss of this subscriber. For a weekly there are fifty-two numbers in a year, and two quires of paper will cost about fifty cents. The poor man's spirits begin to revive and his moral courage is braced up to meet this pecuniary disaster. He takes a look at his somewhat dilapidated hat, and vows he will wear that another year rather than yield up his independence to the 'stop-my-paper' man, and will not be ashamed of its seedy appearance, as it covers the head of a man who will be content with a very low diet rather than submit to be a slave to the dictation of men with wrong-headed prejudices or erroneous principles."

"In the meantime, this irate individual's surprise increases more and more as he discovers that the paper 'still lives' notwithstanding the withdrawal of his important support; and, upon more mature reflection, he comes often to the conclusion that the editor was not so much in the wrong, after all, as he at first supposed."

"Often, however, this errand from his subscription book proves a financial gain; as an examination of the ledger often discloses that against his name stands charged several years of unpaid subscriptions, or that he is on the free list. The latter class, like free lunchers and delinquent boarders, are generally the greatest fault-finders."

"It is one of the most important duties of journalism to lead, rather than follow public opinion. It requires considerable nerve for an editor to stand up manfully against public abuses and vices, especially if he attacks those practices and crafts by which, like the Ephesian silversmiths, a large class of persons obtain their ill-gotten wealth."

"It is high time that the standard of journalism should be elevated above pandering, for the sake of securing the support of the seum of society, to a sycophantic public sentiment, or to the lowest instincts of the populace; and it is also high time that an enlightened community should begin to discriminate, in bestowing its patronage, between an independent press, with a high moral standard in its treatment of the issues of the day, and those treacherous sheets and scandal-mongers that are a bane and disgrace to society."

A Want Supplied

The American mind is active. It has given us books of fiction for the sentimentalists, learned books for the scholar and professional student, but few books for the people. A book for the people must relate to a subject of universal interest. Such a subject is the physical man, and such a book, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," a copy of which has been recently laid on our table. The high professional attainments of its author, Dr. R. V. FICKER, of Buffalo, N. Y., and the advantages derived by him from an extensive practice, would alone insure for his work a cordial reception. But these are not the merits for which it claims our attention. The Author is a man of the people. He sympathizes with them in all their afflictions, efforts and attainments. He perceives their want—a knowledge of themselves—and believing that all truth should be made as universal as God's own sunlight, from his fund of learning and experience he has produced a work in which he gives them the benefit of his labors. In it he considers man in every phase of his existence, from the moment he emerges "from a rayless atom too diminutive for the sight, until he gradually evolves to the maturity of those Conscious Powers the exercise of which furnishes subjective evidence of our immortality." Proceeding upon the theory that every fact of mind has a physical antecedent, he has given an admirable treatise on Cerebral Physiology, and shown the bearings of the facts thus established upon individual and social welfare. The Author believes with Spencer, that "the vigorous health and its accompanying high spirits are larger elements of happiness than any other things whatever, the teaching how to maintain them is a teaching that yields to no other whatever," and accordingly has introduced an extensive discussion of the methods by which we may preserve the integrity of the system and oftentimes prevent the onset of disease. Domestic Remedies—their preparation, uses, and effects—form a prominent feature of the work. The hygienic treatment or nursing of the sick, is an important subject, and receives attention commensurate with its importance. Nearly all diseases "to which flesh is heir" are described, their symptoms and causes explained, and proper domestic treatment suggested. To reciprocate the many favors bestowed upon him by a generous public, the author offers his book at a price ($1.50) little exceeding the cost of publication. Our readers can obtain this practical and valuable work by addressing the author—From The New York Tribune.

What I Have Seen.

An old man of much experience says: "I have seen a young man sell a good farm, turn merchant, and die in an insane asylum. I have seen a farmer travel about so much that there was nothing at home worth looking after. I have seen a man spend more money in folly than would support his family in comfort and independence. I have seen a young girl marry a young man of dissolute habits, and repent it, as she grows old. I have seen a man depart from truth where candor and veracity would have served him a much better purpose. I have seen the extravagance and folly of children bring their parents to poverty and woe, and themselves to disgrace. I have seen a prudent and industrious wife retrieve the fortunes of a family when her husband failed at the other end of the rope. I have seen a young man despise the counsel of the wise, and advice of the good, and his career end in poverty and wretchedness. During the war a Georgian started to Marietta with some chickens for sale. He was a good soldier, and they bought all his chickens but one rooster. He insisted they should take him, but they were out of money, and couldn't buy. The old man said he wanted to go to town with only one chicken, and was greatly puzzled about it. At last one of the soldiers said: 'Old man, I'll play you a game of seven-up for him.' 'Agreed,' said the old man. They played a long and spirited game. At last the soldier won. The old man wrung the rooster's neck and tossed it at the soldier's feet, and mounted his exhausted pony and started for home. After getting some hundred yds he suddenly stopped, turned round and rode back and said: 'You play a prudent and industrious wife retrieve the fortunes of a family when her husband failed at the other end of the rope. I have seen a young man despise the counsel of the wise, and advice of the good, and his career end in poverty and wretchedness.'"
