A Story for the Nationals.

The following story of Moses Hawks explains the workings of the irredeemable greenback theory better than anything we have yet seen, and we recommend its perusal to our National readers:

Moses Hawks was editor of the Allegan Michigan Journal during the war of the rebellion. Moses was a queer old chip, and loved his vittles in the morning and all other times in the day; and by that same token, it got him into no end of ridiculous scrapes, both editorially and personally.
In conjunction with the newspaper business Moses kept a "shingle shanty." The newspaper was run during "flush" times, and old Moses shaved shingles the rest of the year.

Hawks was a great man in his burg, and as currency was scarce in that community, because no one had anything to purchase it with, a bright idea struck him. He went into the office one morning and printed a large batch of promises to pay—quarters, halves and dollars—and occupied several days in affixing the autograph of Moses Hawks to every one of them. Hawks, that is, Moses, was now a wealthy man and possessed unlimited resources. He bought everything offered for sale, and paid his new currency, and also loaned it to his neighbors.

The thing worked like a charm until tax time, when something better was required.
The people flocked to Hawks and demanded redemption. He redeemed by issuing a new batch of scrip and more of it. Prior to this the scrip had passed current among the people, but the new issue had so inflated the "currency" that people refused to receive it longer, it having become so plentiful as to be worthless. Merchants and dealers had sold their goods for the scrip, but could not buy a new stock with it. Hawks was bankrupt and could not redeem, and the people were in a bad plight.

One morning a stranger presented himself to Hawks and demanded that he should redeem that he (the stranger) had received in exchange for his goods, and he (Hawks) had looked after some business matters. Hawks declined the accommodation. The stranger asked: "This is good, is it not, Mr. Hawks?"

"Good thunder!" replied Hawks, "it ought to be, for every man and woman with in fifty miles of this place has from a peck to half bushel of it."

"But, Mr. Hawks, you redeem, don't you?"

"Redeem thunder!" exclaimed Hawk's "it wasn't made to redeem; it was made to circulate!"

QUEEN ELIZABETH.

This queen, in spite of the representations of so many historians, was a woman in marriage, hardhearted in the cruelty of her disposition, and ugly in person. In her sixty-first year she was thus described:—"Her face oblong, fair, but wrinkled; her eyes small, but black and pleasant; her nose a little hooked; her lips narrow and her teeth black; she wore false hair, and that red; her bosom uncovered—"yet was this princess vain to the last degree, and as accessible to flattery as any even of the potentates of following instance may show. When the States of Holland sent a splendid embassy to her, at the first audience one of the em-bassadors said to an English gentleman that he did not know why they should speak with such indifference of the queen's beauty that they did her great injury; that he thought her very charming, and should be happy in having so fine a woman for his wife. The queen, who had her eyes fixed upon the whole suite of foreigners, when the audience was over, sent for the English gentleman and commended him, under pain of displeasure, to tell her what the Dutchman had said to him. The gentleman excused himself a long time, pretending the conversation was nothing but a trifle; the queen, however, was determined to know what the discourse was, upon which he told Her Majesty the whole of what had been said. The conclusion of the matter was that the ambassadors were presented each with a chain of gold of eight hundred crowns each; but the gallant Dutchman, who had found the queen so very handsome, received a chain of six hundred crowns value, which, it is said, may never be to the day of his death.

Grant and the Democracy.

Some one has said that the name of General Grant has the same effect upon the nervous sensibilities of the great mass of Democrats, that a red flag does upon those of a Spanish hue. Hence, the late reports of the Democracy that the ex-president is becoming the victim of softening brain and several other fatal diseases.

The wish no doubt is father to the report.
With Grant under medical care for a hopeless disease, or honorably laid away in some mausoleum by the Army of the Republic, the chances for Democratic success in 1880 would be of the most encouraging character, so think Tilden, Hendricks, Thurman, and their supporters.

Grant carries the prestige of Fort Donalson, of the victories of the Potomac and of the glorious Appomattox; as well as of the Presidency of 1868 and 1872, and is therefore an apparition of terror to the Democratic party.

Victory and Grant, all Democrats know are words of synonymous meaning; and hence his nomination in 1880 signifies a general rout of the gray uniforms from Maine to Texas.—Commercial (S. F.) Advertiser.

An Egyptian newspaper states that the Persians gave the Afghans their present name because, when they were carried away captives by Nebuchadnezzar, they were full of lamentation, and the word afghan, in Persian, has primarily that signification. Others say that Afghans was the name of one of the great chieftains, and that the present people ascribe their origin to him. The Indians and the inhabitants of Kandahar, Khost and other neighboring districts give their names slightly varying from each other, but evidently derived from the same source.
Others, again, deem the Afghans the descendants of the Israelites, and trace the name to that of a place in Palestine.

An Albany man of enterprise has lately gone into the business of weaving wire. He weaves all kinds of wire cloth, which is used in miller's rolling screens, grain separators, fruit driers and in a great many other ways. Three looms in his establishment are running almost constantly, and he is now making arrangements to put in two more.

The Old Fellows of Roseburg will conduct an excursion from that city to Albany on the 22nd inst. Tickets for the round trip are only $3 50 and a large party is expected to go.

The Keeper of the toll gate on the Cascade Mountain Road says that he has a large force of men at work putting the road in good condition for travel. There is no snow now this side of Hackleman's Pass, but the season is going to be late and the snow will not disappear in the Big Lake country until along in the first of June.

A Clerical Mistake.

A prominent and highly cultured Methodist clergyman, residing not more than a hundred miles from this city, was out recently calling upon his prisoners, availing himself of the only few hours he had to spare since his advent among his new people. At several residences he was cordially received by those who had heard, saw and knew him. As his time was limited, his stay at each place was necessarily short.

Upon his list was the name of Hervey, a person represented to him as being a most devoted and active member of his congregation. The clergyman was within a stone's throw of Mr. Hervey's residence, and he made up his mind to call and pass the compliments of the day. Anon the bell was pulled, once, twice, three times, but no response. Concluding that the family were not at home, the good preacher turned to leave the premises, when he thought he heard a stir at the back part of the house.

Thither he retraced his steps, and appeared at the back door, knocking for admittance.
The gentleman of the house appeared in proper person, and after gazing at the cler-gyman a moment, asked: "What do you want?"

"Well, sir, what do you want?"

"I thought I would call and—"

"You did, did you," replied the man of the house; "you've been looking for me looking for me. We'll see whether your dirty tramps are to be continuously bothering my house!" and taking the preacher by the nape of the neck, and the coat tail, petit fouetted him, and the clergyman, getting through the front gate and ordered him to leave the premises.

Imagine the feelings of the said Hervey when he listened to the eloquent sermon on the following Sunday by the person whom he took for a pesky tramp. Appearances are sometimes deceiving.—Dubuque Herald.

CHINESE RICE PAPER.

The thick, soft, translucent material called Chinese rice-paper, is commonly supposed to be made of rice, or some sort of fibre obtained from the rice plant. A recent writer says that it is not so made, but is the pith of a Fatsia papyrifera, sliced thin. The tree grows about twenty feet high, and its pith is an extensive article of commerce in China, for it is used in the manufacture of many articles, especially toys and artificial flowers. The cylinders of pith exposed on removing the bark and woody fibre are rarely an inch and half in diameter, and as the substance is delicate and tender, and skill and practice are required to cut the whole stick from the circumference to center into one continuous sheet. A long, thin, very sharp knife is used for this operation.
The largest sheets that can be obtained in this way are about fifteen inches long by ten wide. As soon as the sheets are cut they are spread out all little by little, until they are dried, and then they are pressed under heavy weights until dry. The refuse scraps, etc., are used to make paper, the ordinary sheets are dried, and then they are pressed under weights until dry. The refuse scraps, etc.,

SAD END OF A CLANDESTINE WEDDING.— A love story with a tragic ending is reported from Cincinnati. For over a year a young law student there has been pining for a girl known to himself, while taking a drive last April, decided to go to a justice of the peace and get married. During the following months they kept their marriage a secret
