NEEDS INVESTIGATION. The reckless disregard of human life, in large cities, is becoming alarming, and seems to be spreading, like an epidemic, throughout this coast. You can scarcely pick up a newspaper that does not contain an account of some blood-thirsty tragedy. The list of horrid murders committed in this State, during the past year, is enough to startle every reader and arouse public indignation. The heart sickens while reading the various recitals of foul deeds. And now follows 20th inst. another, which was recently enacted in Portland, but which falls, with crushing effect upon hearts in this county and in Linn.

Last Friday, Mr. J. S. Gray, of this city, was summoned to attend the funeral of his azed father, whose death occurred under very painful and suspicious circumstances in the city of Portland, last week.

The deceased, John Gray, a respected farmer of Linn county, aged about 77 years, had been visiting a son in Eastern Oregon. and was returning to his home in Linn. Arriving at Portland, on The Dalles boat on Friday night, he stopped, we belive, at the Oregon Hotel. Next morning he was found, by the police, on the street in front of the hotel, in an insensible condition, supposed to be under the influence of liquor, and was conveyed to jail. He remained in an unconscious state until Monday, when he revived, and sent for Frank Paxton, a relative, who had him immediately conveyed to the St. Vincent Hospital, where, despite medical care and attention, he died on the Wednesday following. He knew nothing of how he came upon the street, but says touched strong drink, which clearly shows up by detectives, and it is to be sincerely livered to any part of the city. hoped the guilt will be traced to its proper source, and the perpetrators of the foul deed visited with the severest penalty of MOLLIE AND I. BX H. D. MOON-CORVALLIS.

I am courting Mollie Brown,
The fairest lady in the town;
On her face there's ne'er a frown;
How could there be with soul so face!
Oft when the sun had sank below,
And the stars were all aglow,
Have I wandered singing low,
With levers glee, my love to see,

Oft I've met her at the gate,
Where she loves to watch and wait,
As a bird looks for its mate,
So sweetly shy; with half shut eye,
I will not keep her waiting long,
For you know it would be wrong
I'll whisper words more sweet than
Bye and bye—the time is nigh.

She foves me with a love divine, And puts her little hand in mine, And says so sweetly, "I am thine," What should I do, with faith so true? Why then I clasp her in my arms, And kiss away loves shy alarms, And swear allegiance to her charms, Life's journey through and so would you. You say such true love cannot last, That it will die with sorrow's blast. Stop, my friend, don't judge so fast, You cannot know; dont grieve me so, I've told her that I loyed her well, More than mortal tongue could tell.
