OFFICIAL PAPER FOR BENTON COUNTY

CONKLING VS. GARFIELD.

President Garfield when entering upon his official duties, no doubt supposed himself authorized to exercise the same prerogatives under the constitution of the United States as his predecessors had done before him. Among other things, the appointing power to various offices such as collectors of customs, post masters, U. S. marshals and many others of like nature having always been exercised by the president. He likewise after being inaugurated proceeded to appoint certain officials to fill the different positions in the state of New York. Among others he appointed Robertson for collector of customs at the port of New York, without first consulting the wishes of Roscoe Conkling, the Senator from New York. Mr. Conkling being displeased with such appointment, for some time past has been prosecuting a contest in the Senate to ascertain if the president is authorized to make such appointment or whether Conkling shall be permitted to exercise that prerogative. At last the president has assumed an attitude of defense, and we hope that it will soon dawn upon Mr. Conkling's vision that he does not possess that authority. If Mr. Conkling had been living during the time when dictators were common, he would no doubt have been a fit subject to exercise the authority of such a position, but in this day and age of the world, the people of a republican form of government want but few dictators. And we sincerely hope and think that president Garfield possesses sufficient ability and force of character to soon convince Mr. Conkling that he will not, under any circumstances, be dictated to by one man or any faction when it is contrary to his own views and not likely to be conducive to the interests of the people. In short we hope that Garfield will during the term for which he was elected president, be governed in his official capacity by his own good, common sense and for the general good of the people at large, and not be subservient to the dictations of any faction contrary to his own sense of duty.

By commenting thus upon the conduct of Mr. Conkling, we do not mean to detract from his ability, for we concede him to be gifted with great ability and untiring perseverance, both qualifications being very essential to one occupying his high position, and while occupying his seat in the councils of the nation, if he would devote his attention to the many questions of legislation which the nation is so much in need of having them pass in the form of laws, and not be continually engaged in promoting discord and confusion, his efforts in that direction would no doubt result in much good to the country.

But if Mr. Conkling's endeavors in obstructing the machinery of the government are continued in the future, as they have been in the past, there is no doubt that the republican party had best sit down upon him effectually and for all time to come, for under such condition of affairs as he has been instrumental in bringing about in the present senate, the sooner his political function are at an end, the better it will be for the republican party and the people generally.

The time has arrived in our country's progress when the people want the person whom they elect to occupy the important position of president to perform all the duties pertaining to the office as prescribed by the constitution and laws, and not be duped or frightened into the practice of using his official position and powers to promote the private schemes of those who may take upon themselves the too often repeated and unwarrantable privilege of dictating terms to the detriment of the public welfare.

The dispatches of the week presents us with a somber and tragical picture of the interior life of the Imperial household. The Czar, a self-sentenced prisoner at the castle of Gotschina, is described as in momentary dread of assassination, notwithstanding the multiplied and unheard of precautions to baffle the murderous enterprise of his mysterious foe. Surrounded by an army of sentinels, he is haunted by constant suspicions of treachery, even among his guards. His sleeping chamber is protected by massive iron shutters, and when he leaves it, it is by subterranean passages. Meantime the Empress, warned that she has been secretly doomed to a death more dreadful than that from which she failed to save Sophia Pieoffsky, passes sleepless nights and is subject to the most fearful hysterical seizures. Life under such circumstances must be a constant torture. It is doubtful if a more wretched couple could be found in all the vast dominions of Alexander III.

YAQUINA BAY.

EDITORS GAZETTE.—You say that you wish me to let you know how things look at the Bay. First let me say, in answering your request, that the Yaquina road is now in fair order for traveling, except some abominable "chuck-holes" which would be fatal to the comfort of any buggy travellers.

Pray use your influence with the Supervisors to have these seen to at once. Half an hour's work on each would fill them up and render the road pleasant going. On the Keyes' Hill some of the planking provided last year lies on the very edge of the worst holes, and five minutes labor would set these right here.

I rode to Elk City and left my horse there: the next day went on down the Yaquina in the mail carrier's boat. The steam launch is now running. At Cannon's place, about six miles below Elk City we passed the new quarry. The surface stone has been removed and used to form a landing right alongside the deep water, so that the scows can take on their load of stone direct from the quarry. Nothing could turn out better than the quarry has done. Just below the soft surface stone lies a bed many feet thick of hard blue stone that the quarrymen call "basaltic." The engineers say they might go very far indeed to find rock better suited to the purpose.

Down at Oneatta the work is in full swing. Before you reach the turn in the river you hear the shriek ing of the circular saws as they rasp through the great logs, and the tumult of the hammering and caulking on the scows fills the air. The derrick scow is completed and at work driving piles to form a dock for the scows to load brush for the mattresses. The first great scow is completed and will be launched to day. She is a credit both to designers and builders, for solidity and convenience of construction. She will carry between two and three hundred tons of stone at a time, and will cost under $1400. The timbers for the second scow are nearly all ready, and those for the two great cribs lie piled up on the wharf ready to be put in their places.

There are about 2 hundred cords of brush bound in bundles ready for use piled close by, and a gang of brush-cutters, (amongst whom we saw the genial face of Kit Abbey,) were all hard at work on the hill side close at hand. The best of brush grows in plenty theres and both Mr. Polhemus and the superintendent and foremen expressed themselves delighted with the material provided by nature for them.

The return of the tug has been earnestly pressed, and just as soon as she gets back the work will commence in earnest by sinking the cribs across where the narrow south channel cut through the sand last year.

The engineers intend to prevent the water finding its way through this channel this season, and they expect thus to preserve at any rate the present depth of water on the bar. They say that nature has done work that would have cost thousands of dollars: and they are most anxious to lose none of the advantage of it.

Mr. Polhemus entirely confirms the depth of 20 feet at the most shallow place when the Gen'l Wright tug went out the other day. In order to prevent any question as to the accuracy, he had the casting line measured before the eyes of the various gentlemen present. This cast was just at high water. At two hours flood they found 12 feet at the same shallowest place, and all the rest of the courses much deeper.

So far as I am able to judge, there is every reason to believe in the determination of all the government officers, of whatever grad , to stretch the $50.000 to its fullest capacity. But with all this, the money runs out, so far as I can calculate, at over $700 a month. Thus by September all the $50,000 will be spent.

If Judge Moore and his friends can get a special session of Congress called, and then get a special appropriation passed for this work, they will be justified in the advice they give the inhabitants of this valley to trust entirely to congress to get this work done: for in that case the work will not have to be stopped. But such a success as that would be, to my mind, the only decent excuse they could offer for the tone taken at the Albany meeting and repeated by Judge Moore in last week's GAZETTE.

But if there is not the slightest chance of such a miracle being worked by them, I should like to know what possible good it can do the farmers of this valley to see the work stopped, the engineers take their departure, the staff of workmen it will take months to train, all disperse to the four points of the compass, the scows laid up in ordinary to rot on a mud bank, and the waves left to work their will on the partly completed jetty. And then when congress has met again, and further efforts have been made and further appropriations are obtained, half of them will have to be frittered away, and absolutely wasted, to get things to the point they will be in next Sept.: and we are to take the chances of all this to satisfy the scruples of a little knot of men whom it is not proposed for a moment to force to do anything they prefer to leave alone, but who are only asked to stand by and let others do it if they see fit.

In Heaven's name, gentlemen, make the people of the valley see the goods they are deliberately throwing away if they choose to let the works stop. At present all is life, energy and confidence: and what is needed to keep all moving on in the same successful groove is so small an effort that he would scarcely feel it. It is to the press we all look in these matters, and to a paper with the previous history of the Corvallis GAZETTE, such a call should not be addressed in vain.

Very Respec fully,
WALLIS NASH.

YAQUINA BAY.

We are in receipt of the following affidavit of Capt. John M. Ayles of Benton county an old and experienced seaman. It is in reference to the harbor and bar at Yaquina and will be of great interest to our readers.

COPY OF AFFIDAVIT.

STATE OF OREGON, }
County of Benton. }

I, John M. Ayles, of Benton county aforesaid, being duly sworn, make oath and say as follows:

1. I was at Newport, on Yaquina Bay, in Benton county, on Monday the 11th day of April, 1881. I found that the Gen'l Wright, U. S. Government tugboat which came down to Newport from the saw mill at Oneatta some six miles up the bay.

2. The Captain and two seaman of the vessel had been drowned on the previous Thursday in attempting to cross in over the bar in a heavy sea in a small boat. Being well known to Mr. J. S. Polhemus, the government engineer in charge of the harbor improvement works at Yaquina he asked me to take charge of the vessel and to take her out to the U. S. coast survey steamer Shubrick, which was lying to off the harbor mouth, waiting to deliver stores intended for the harbor works.

3. I declined to take charge of the vessel unless he, Mr. Polhemus, went out as pilot, as he was so thoroughly acquainted with the bar. This he consented to, and we left the wharf at Newport about 10 o'clock in the morning, it being then nearly high water. There was not much sea on the bar. The lead was hove all the time that we were nearing and crossing the bar. The least water we had was twenty feet and that only at one cast of the lead.

4. We went out with perfect ease at full speed ahead the whole time, and it was about twenty minutes from the time we left the wharf at Newport untill we were over the bar.

5. We proceeded in company with the Shubrick to a position about south east of Cape Foulweather, and about three miles from the bar. Both vessels anchored there and the stores intended for the works were transferred from the Shubrick to the Gen'l Wright.

6. We remained at anchor till six o'clock and then proceeded to the mouth of the harbor to ascertain if it were practicable to enter. Finding that it was, Mr. Polhemus decided that he would take the vessel in. It was now just two hours flood with a good sea running. The lead was kept going the whole time we were near or on the bar. The casts were taken as rapidly as possible and the water shoaled to twelve feet at one cast only, deepening again immediately, and this cast was taken in the trough of the sea.

7. The channel is clear and well defined from any position aloft or, even from the deck of a moderately high vessel. The approach is easy and the entrance safe for vessels of any length not exceeding fifteen feet in draught. On a smooth day a vessel drawing seventeen feet could enter at high water.

8. I have had thirty-five years experience at sea as an officer and in command. I commanded clipper ships on long voyages for upwards of fifteen years, and have had ten years experience in steam vessels sailing across the Atlantic, to the West Indies and Gulf of Mexico, and also the Straights of Magellan, and thence through the Smyth's channel, entering and anchoring in all the small harbors in those waters. I am also familiar with most of the coast harbors in Australia and New Zealand.

9. Speaking in general terms on the basis of this experience, I consider the harbor at Yaquina, even as it is, perfectly safe for steamers and for sailing ships with the aid of a tug not drawing more water than above indicated, to enter at a proper time of tide of course, making due allowance for the weather. The offing is good and vessels having to wait for the tide can either anchor or stand off and either to the north or south of Cape Foulweather.

I consider that the improvement now in progress will begin almost at once to deepen the water on the bar and on completion of the jetty or breakwater I am confident that the sand will be permanently removed from the bar, and that the rock now forming its core, is very narrow, and easily removed. I base this opinion on the rapid deepening of the water on each side of the center of the bar.

(Signed) JOHN M. AYLES.

Sworn before me this 22nd day of April, 1881. B. W. WILSON,
County Clerk of Benton Co., Or.

DROWNED.—We learn from Dr. McCauley that Oscar Miller, son of August Miller, better known as "Dutch Miller," living near Stayton, was drowned in the Santiam at that place on Sunday, May 1st as is supposed. The little boat in which he was seen last, was found capsized at the headgate of the ditch, and his hat was picked up in a drift. Diligent search has been made for the body, but up to Wednesday evening no trace of it had been discovered. The missing lad was about sixteen years of age.—Statesman.

Is a compound of the virtues of sarsaparilla, stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, with the iodide of potash and iron, all powerful blood-making, blood-cleansing, and life-sustaining elements. It is the purest, safest, and in every way the most effectual alterative medicine known or available to the public. The sciences of medicine and chemistry have never produced so valuable a remedy, nor one so potent to cure all diseases resulting from impure blood. It cures Scrofula, and all scrofulous diseases, Erysipelas, Rose, or St. Anthony's Fire, Pimples and Face-grubs, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scald-head, Ringworm, Ulcers, Sores, Rheumatism, Mercurial Disease, Neuralgia, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, and General Debility.

By its searching and cleansing qualities it purges out the foul corruptions which contaminate the blood, and cause derangement and decay. It stimulates and enlivens the vital functions. It promotes energy and strength. It restores and preserves health. It infuses new life and vigor throughout the whole system. No sufferer from any disease which arises from impurity of the blood need despair, who will give AYER'S SARSAPARILLA a fair trial. Remember, the earlier the trial, the speedier the cure.

Its recipe has been furnished to physicians everywhere; and they, recognizing its superior qualities, administer it in their practice.

For nearly forty years AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has been widely used, and it now possesses the confidence of millions of people who have experienced benefits from its marvellous curative virtues.
