

Corvallis Jan. 27, 1882.

M. S. WOODCOCK, ATTORNEY AT LAW.

OFFICIAL PAPER FOR BENTON COUNTY

IMPROVEMENT OF YAQUINA BAY.

$200,000 Needed for that Purpose.

The Legislature Asked for that Amount.

THE PEOPLE SHOULD DEMAND IT.

The last Legislature of Oregon asked Congress to appropriate $200,000 for the purpose of aiding the improvement of the harbor at Yaquina Bay.

In the face of this recommendation, to our utter surprise a bill has been introduced in Congress by a member from this State asking only the small sum of $60,000.

It is self evident to every observer of the progress of the last years work under the $40,000 appropriation that the sum of $200,000 will be little enough to carry on the work to any possible advantage.

The tolling thousands of the producers of this State who have in the aggregate contributed within the last twenty years, millions upon millions of their hard earned substance to carry their produce to the sea board by way of the mouth of the Columbia River, a distance of not less than two hundred and twenty miles, when nearly all of these great sums for freight can be saved, and get their produce to the Yaquina Bay within a distance of from sixty to seventy miles, should rise up in mass and with indignation demand that our Senators and Representatives in Congress see to it that a sum of not less than $200,000 be forthcoming by way of the appropriation under consideration.

The greatest preventative to the administration of justice by court and jury in the usual manner is the lamentable fact that a great portion of the editorial department of the press of our land is in the hands of and controlled by a contemptible lot of unscrupulous persons who take the liberty of commenting at length in the most careless manner upon the present manner of administering justice, and the practice therein adhered to, when they know nothing whatever about the subject and care less about the welfare of the public.

Lynch law makes every person the law maker, judge and executioner of his supposed wrongs. And the comments of the vacillating sheet above alluded to is better calculated to elicit the applause of a sand lot rabble than an honest law abiding, and well disposed people. Such an utter disregard for the good order of society is the reason why the Sand-lot element have disregarded the rights of others to forcibly redress some supposed grievances on this coast.

The same lack of principle and utter disregard for the law and good order led Guiteau into the fancied notion that he could act as law maker, judge and executioner over some of his disappointments and imaginary grievances and in order to do so he assassinated the president.

And the same disregard for the public welfare and a total lack of the appreciation for the peace and good order of mankind no doubt causes that so called "Only newspaper" to advocate at different times all sides and phases of every question before the public, at one time advocating the principle of maintaining a tariff and at another time when the monopoly which holds it firm in its grasp wishes the tariff to be removed so that it can import her steel rails without payment of duty, we find this wonderful gumbastic paper advocating the antiquated and stale democratic theory of free trade.

The blackleg skilling cattle in Chewan valley, Lake county. It appears to be a disease distinct in itself and not to be governed by the same laws that control other contagious diseases among cattle, for it shows itself almost without warning in localities where it is not expected, and running its course in a short time disappears altogether, and again turns up in some place remote from the scene of its ravages. No means of preventing its fatality have been discovered and it comes and goes without any apparent accountable cause.

Coal Prospects. Coal prospectors lately arrived at Astoria from Nehalem report a good showing in the country bounded by the Humburg on the east and the two Nehalem on the west and south. A party of miners are tunneling in on a good vein between the south Nehalem and the Miami. The coal near Knappa, sixteen miles above Astoria, is being prospect. Large pieces of coal are found on a branch of Gray's river, promising well as prospecting progresses.

THE SEATTLE TRAGEDY.

And the Press in Ignorant Hands.

The late sensation at Seattle in which the three parties there accused of crime was brutally murdered by the infuriated mob at that place deserves more than a passing notice. In the sense that all men who commit deliberate and willful murder or kill their fellow man while in the act of committing another felony should be hung, it matters not particularly in what manner the result is arrived at. But in the sense that all persons should obey the law and that a mob of 200 persons have no more right to commit murder than does an individual, and that it is the absolute duty of every good citizen to exercise their influence in carrying out the established provisions of law, and thus prevent the danger of drifting back into anarchy and confusion it makes an important difference.

The two individuals who were accused of murdering Reynolds, had been examined by the proper magistrate and had been by him remanded to jail to await the action of the grand jury before the mob had taken charge of them. The man who was accused of the murder of the policeman there but a short time before had also had a preliminary examination before the proper magistrate and had also been bound over, and was then confined in jail to await the action of the grand jury. In both cases the law had taken its regular course and from all that can be learned about the whole affair none of these parties were likely to escape the ends of justice or the gallows.

And yet we find the editor of that self conceived and egotistical termed, "only newspaper of Oregon" while editorially commenting on this horrible affair, says: "The people want to hear less of the alleged majesty of the law and more of the enforcement of actual justice. They see their courts organized and conducted not to punish crimes but to try to find methods through which criminals may be protected. From first to last every proceeding in a criminal trial is conducted with a view to discover defects in justice. The practice is not only tolerated by the courts, but is invited and encouraged by them. Hence courts and lawyers, under modern criminal practice, are virtually in a league against society and on the side of criminals. So everywhere, when a heinous crime is committed, the effort is not to punish the offender, but to find a way to get him clear and judges, particularly those who have been long on the bench, constantly connive at the proceeding, because they have learned to worship the "precedent" which the technical lawyer is able to cite.

Every effort is made, usually with the approval of the court, to confuse and befog the jury, to entangle its judgment in a labyrinth of phrases, to impress it with an idea of the sanctity of technical subtleties, and to get a verdict against justice through adherence to meaningless forms. Juries must be made of good material if they can stand against this habitual practice and the instructions from the bench, which are usually in full accord with it.

The above quotation contains no less than twenty of the most inexcusable falsehoods and misrepresentations that was ever perpetrated upon a reading public. The greatest preventative to the administration of justice by court and jury in the usual manner is the lamentable fact that a great portion of the editorial department of the press of our land is in the hands of and controlled by a contemptible lot of unscrupulous persons who take the liberty of commenting at length in the most careless manner upon the present manner of administering justice, and the practice therein adhered to, when they know nothing whatever about the subject and care less about the welfare of the public.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C. Jan. 20, 1881. The yule-tide, over our legislators have come back to us "with capon lined" and in such a contented state of mind that they have apparently little appetite for the usual wrangle and turmoil of law-making. But soon the legislative day will begin in earnest both in the dignified, deliberate, never-in-a-hurry Senate, and the noisy frisky, eagle-flying House. And like a comet, Congress sports a following, so that the Capital City is once more full, and this time for the winter. With the city filled up, and the world white with snow, winter seems fairly opened at last in this semi-southern "river-town," and "things look like business."

The country is getting thoroughly worked up to the idea that the popular branch of Congress is once more fully in the hands of the Republican party, and also to the full import of the western victory achieved in the election of Gen. Kiefer as speaker. It appears now on a calm review of his own work, that the new Speaker deliberately constituted the Committees in such a way as to give the greatest amount of power to the Republicans and to bias legislation in favor of the West, or rather, so as to shape it according to Western ideas without encroaching upon eastern interests. Democrats are so-called-tailed in, on the tail ends of the Committees, as to give them the least influence not only in the Committee work but in the House. Very few of the Committees have got fairly to work yet, but today the greater part of the new clerks have got things into shape to begin house-keeping. I sat a few moments in the room appropriated to the "Claims" Committee yesterday, and it was amusing to see the "old stagers" come in to inquire after their cases—cases, some of them, which have been before Congress for the last fourteen years. A few of them have just and proper claims, and in all decency they ought to be paid; but, some how or other, they always get snowed under on the Speaker's table at the close of the session and die the death with the bad company they are in.

Since it became known that Gen. Grant had changed his mind concerning the Fitz John Porter case there has been considerable curiosity touching the effect this would have upon friends of the ex-President in the Senate and elsewhere. People were especially solicitous about Senator Logan who made such an exhaustive speech last winter in opposition to Porter. In response to an inquiry on the subject, however, the Senator said a day or two ago that he was very much surprised at the change in Gen. Grant's opinion as the latter had frequently in his presence expressed himself so strongly against Porter's conduct. Gen. Logan says there is nothing new in the case to cause him to change his views; that he has nothing to take back, and will continue to oppose Porter's restoration to the army, no matter who may come to the rescue. So in this, as in all other things, Logan has strong convictions of his own and is thoroughly consistent. Whatever other changes may yet be made in the Cabinet I am well assured by those here who ought to know, that Robert T. Lincoln will continue at the head of the War Department. He seems to be running it along peaceably, as is most in these times of piping peace, and traditional Lincoln Republicanism is not a bad thing for a Republican President to have as a component part of his administration.

Anna Dickinson, whose magnetic platform eloquence, earnest face and firm "jaw" is known all over the country, and who has determined to play men's characters on the stage, will shortly appear here. Hamlet, Macbeth, and Claudio Melancthe will make up her repertoire, with perhaps "Aurilian," her own play. Her company consists of over thirty people. Washington expects Miss Dickinson's indomitable energy, bright intellect, and magnetic spirit to win her success on the stage as they have elsewhere. How reputation may hang by a single hair—or at least by a few frizzes! Mrs. Speaker Kiefer (so to speak) wears no lang, nor crimp, nor frizz; but "puts away her dark brown hair," parted in the middle, and combed low down on each side of her head, ala Mrs. Hayes, though less "pop-eyed." And Capital circles are proceeding to "comb her down" for it. "Uneasy is the head that wears a crown"—not done up in frizzes and bangs.

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS IN CONGRESS. The "Evening Telegram" of a late date is evidently a little off, or else it may be that a bill not suitable to this organ's ideas of locality has been introduced to Congress. It editorially says: "Our Senators and Congressmen keep on introducing bills in a way which shows that they are very industrious men."

"If there is a man in the State who has a little more ability to get a measure through, he would be a good man to elect next time even if he did not introduce quite so many bills." The above comments are inconsistent and unjust, because they censure our Senators and Representative in Congress in the first place for introducing bills and in the second place for not succeeding in their passage. We may be mistaken, however, for it may be that the "Telegram" has selected for those important positions men who are capable of getting measures through Congress without ever going to the trouble of introducing them. This is a great age of advancement. Wonders will never cease and who knows but our evening contemporary has made this valuable and important discovery.

S. P. R. R. Progress. Mr. Scott informs us that the N. P. R. R. track has been laid to Bend d'Orville lake and that the caps are being put on the piles for the long bridge. All the piles have been driven save a few in the main channel. About fifteen miles of road bed beyond the lake have been so nearly graded that it will be ready for the track layers in a few days. About 2700 men are at work on the road. The snow is about two feet deep in the woods and about a foot deep in the openings. The weather has not been cold enough to interfere with the work. So says the Walla Walla Union.

Another fool.

The Tribune announces that perpetual motion has been discovered by Prof. Joshua Garratt, who has been a mechanic for many years and in no respect cranky. His system consists of two cylinders working transversely in a vacuum upon the model, which works until the bearings are worn out, thus creating practically a perpetual motion.

Returning Home. C. C. Beekman, who has been paying his old home in New York a protracted visit, is expected home in a few days, having arrived in San Francisco last week.
