REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.

By order of the Republican State Central Committee, a Republican convention for the state of Oregon is called to meet at Portland, on Thursday, April 20th 1882, at 11 o'clock a. m.

The committee passed a resolution recommending that all delegates elected to this convention attend personally, so far as possible, or by proxies residing in the counties to be represented.

PRECINCT AND COUNTY CONVENTION.

At a meeting of the Republican county central committee, for Benton county, called to order by Hon. A. M. Witham, chairman, on last Wednesday, the number of delegates for the several precincts to the county convention was apportioned on the vote of State printer Odell, at the ratio of one delegate for each twenty votes and one also for each fraction over ten, and one delegate at large for each precinct, which resulted in giving to the several precincts the following number of delegates:

THE "OREGONIAN" GAIN.

It is a little hard on H. Villard and his Portland friends that when this precious "leading journal" of theirs tries to be injurious and destructive to his and their vals. it only succeeds in making him and them ridiculous. All its false statements, dressed up with what art it can muster, recoil like boomerangs on the throwers. The Oregon Pacific could not wish for a better advertisement than the slanders of the "Oregonian." As far as Colonel Hogg and W. Nash are concerned we congratulate them on having earned the spite of this most "unpopular at home" and "misleading abroad" journal, as W. Nash truly calls it in "Two Years in Oregon."

whose money is building the Oregon Pacific. Depend upon it the "Oregonian" could not tell these men any truth they do not already know either about Yaquina Bay, or the trade of Oregon, present or future; and as for falsehoods they pass like idle wind. For falsehoods they are, as every one knows in this town and country who has now or has ever had any dealings with Yaquina for years past. Readers of the GAZETTE know that hardly any captain has gone in and out of Yaquina without reporting the depth of water on the bar. Many of us are personally acquainted with Captain Carroll, and Captain Winant, and Captain Hilmyer, and Captain Lutjens and the other shipmasters, who, with their crews, have been using Yaquina Harbor for years—and we do not propose to discredit what all these men and many others too, equally reliable, have been reporting all this time about the depth of water on the bar, because some newspaper hack in the upstairs room in Portland, who most probably has never been within a hundred miles of Yaquina, or talked with more than one other man who has been there, has been told to write that "there is less than 18 feet depth of water on the Yaquina Bar at highest tide. Mr. Hogg's and Mr. Nash's falsehoods to the contrary notwithstanding, and there is not deep water room in Yaquina Bay for a large fleet."

If Oregon investments and Oregon securities don't get more harm than they are likely to get from the Oregon Pacific we people who live in Oregon have not much cause for alarm. We have not heard yet of any investors in the Oregon Pacific wriggling and squirming to find means to pay up their assessments on watered stock.

By the way, the "Willamette Farmer" insinuates that the Oregon Pacific stock, some of which seems to be attached to the bonds, so as to give the bond holders a real interest in the property of the company, is "watered stock." Now our old friend S. A. Clarke knows better than this. So old a dabbler in O. & C. railroad stocks, in the good old days of Ben Holladay, S. G. Elliott and S. A. Clarke himself, cannot possibly have forgotten all he knew about "watered stock"—perhaps he calls it "negus" now. Know what "negus" stock is? Made up of w(h)ine and water—possibly though after all, the old man has forgotten. Well then "water" stock is, not to fix even an extravagant estimate on the stock an enterprise will carry at its commencement, but, to "water" stock is to make the biggest possible showing of profits or dividends after the business has been running for a while, and then to divide up the nominal shares, so as to get new purchasers in and let the original, bedrock, holders get out at a profit. Perhaps some of our Portland friends who are stockholders now in some of these Villard enterprises could "rise and explain" a little further.

THE POLYGAMY BILL.

The Polygamy bill recently passed by congress, whether effectual or not for the end for which it is intended, will meet the approval of every right-minded citizen. The monstrous iniquity of polygamy is a foul blot and sickening cancer on American civilization. Marriage, when kept within its proper and legitimate sphere, is one of the most sacred and priceless boons ever vouchsafed by God to man. It is the sheet-anchor of society and a prime condition of the stability and perpetuity of our government and of the hopes of freedom. Polygamy robs this institution and relationship of its essential characteristics and sacredness and prostitutes it to the propensities of lust and concubinage.

An institution so far-reaching in its results and in its bearings on the order, happiness and well-being of society and government, comes legitimately within the scope and jurisdiction of government and can never be safely relegated to the uncertain control, capricious regulation and jarring discords of ecclesiastical synods and councils, under the specious guise of religious freedom. The law-making power is the proper authority to define what shall be regarded as crimes, as also to impose the penalties for their violation. The authority of government to regulate the rights of person and property is unquestioned. Subject to these restrictions, religious liberty should be unbridled in character and untrampled in the discharge of its obligations.

Polygamy, however, is but another name for adultery. The Mormon assumption that the commission of this crime is justifiable under the authority of a pretended religious creed, scarcely merits serious refutation. As well contend that murder, rape, arson, and the entire catalogue of crimes would be justifiable, under like circumstances and for similar reasons.

Freedom of conscience and of speech are sacred domain, which even government has no right to invade, so long as they are confined to their proper sphere, parties being rightfully responsible only for the abuse of the same. With this limitation, one may believe or disbelieve anything whatever, and avail himself of every occasion to advocate the same, both by tongue and pen and he commits no crime, but on the contrary, exercises a right inalienable and indefeasible. We may do anything we please so we do not injure others, and the law has no right to interfere. It is the right and duty of government, however, to protect its citizens against the wrongful and injurious acts of one another, and this, too, even if such wrongful and injurious acts were prompted by the dictates of an honest conscience or the supposed obligations of sectarian creeds and formalities.

The right, therefore, of congress to enact such laws as will effectually suppress and prohibit polygamy, is as clear as any proposition in logic or arithmetic. The practical question to be determined now is, whether or not the bill recently passed by congress will accomplish this praiseworthy object. It is well known that the provisions of law and applications of courts, having for their object the suppression and punishment of Mormon crimes in Utah, have hitherto been little less than a broad farce. Mormonism is a politico-ecclesiastical despotism, and its adherents recognize a higher allegiance to their so-called church than to the government itself. This being so, the difficulty of enforcing any law for the extirpation of polygamy is apparent. If, however, it shall be found impossible to root out this green-eyed monster of iniquity, owing to the perjury, machinations and deviltry of Mormonism, congress having "the right to make all needful rules and regulations for the government of the territories," may be forced to the necessity of subjecting the territory to martial law, or to the adoption of such other expedient as, in its wisdom, may be effectual in ridding the country of this monstrous abomination.

SATAN HEARD FROM.

In the Daily Standard of Wednesday last, an article occurs entitled "Another Idol Smashed." In which the editor of that journal comments recklessly in an unfavorable manner upon the life and character of the late President "Garfield." In that attempt to tarnish Garfield's good name "Tony" reminds one of the Arch fiends attack upon his superior and his after flight and descension into eternal darkness. We have not yet learned that the editor of the Standard has descended into the fiery region, but time will no doubt bring tidings of that final result. A pretty specimen of humanity to attempt any detraction from the good name of our departed president. He had better write a volume or two on Oregon's unfortunate Grover administration, in which the Standard bearer figured in such an unenviable manner.

The rule by which the State printing was measured would furnish a grand theme for volume 1st. The object of adopting that rule being for the purpose of demoralizing the State Treasury to a proper Standard would suffice for vol. 2nd.

Two Years in Oregon.

Two years in Oregon by Mr. Wallis Nash is a well written book of 310 pages printed in a book paper containing several illustrations of different parts of the state. The author criticises in a very pleasant manner the customs and habits of our people viewed from the standpoint of one who has until recently been accustomed to the ways and manners of a foreign people, and many of these suggestions might be studied with profit. A thorough description of many portions of our state with a general review of the resources, industries and general development of the state is given, and exhibits a more thorough knowledge by the writer of Oregon than many possess who have been here for a much longer time. The climate and agricultural progress of the state is quite thoroughly discussed with valuable hints upon variety farming, which, if pursued more thoroughly in Oregon, would prove untold benefit to the country, and add materially to the profits of the producers. Our limited space forbids a further notice of the many other interesting subjects treated of in this book. It would, however, be well for all persons who can do so to procure and read it. It will be found for sale on the counter of Mr. C. H. Nash near the postoffice in this place.

Ka-ta-tah, the Indian murderer, is, at his own request, to be hanged on the 25th inst.
