THE EDITOR'S VACATION.

The tired editor sat in his chair, Freshly breathing the hot, sultry air, And writing up "Personals" in column after column, Of folks who are gone, and others to go.

Farmers' Homes.

"There's no place like home." Much has been said and written upon what should be done to make a model home for the farmer. Made up as this country is largely of farmers and farms, its pride should be in the attractiveness of farmers' homes.

Crop Products in South America.

The latest Buenos Ayres journals speak in terms of positive enthusiasm with respect to the abundance of their crops. The wool clip has turned out beyond the most sanguine expectations, being some 25,000 bales in excess of that of last year.

Early Fattening of Animals.

It is quite as important to fatten and market economically, the animal products of the farm, as it is to raise them. A pound of beef, pork, or poultry, can be made much cheaper in September and October, than later in the season, when a larger part of the rations must go to keep up animal heat.

appetite, and keep up good digestion. We have found green corn stalks especially sweet corn, an excellent article in the sty, to be fed in connection with corn on the cob, and corn meal, and other rations. We have never seen pork made more rapidly than with this kind of feeding.

Putting away Tools.

The wearing out of farm implements is, as a rule, due more to neglect than to use. If tools can be well taken care of, it will pay to buy those made of the best steel, and finished in the best manner; but in common hands, and with common care, such are of little advantage.

Whitewash the Out-Buildings.

There is no more healthful method of keeping the stables, sheds, and pens clean than to give them a good coat of lime-wash. The wash is easily and quickly made as follows: Slake a bushel of fresh lime in a pork, or other barrel, with water enough to make a thick paste, after which fill up the barrel with hot water, and let it stand for a few hours.

Apples for Export.

From reliable sources we learn that the apple crop will be very poor in England this year, and not over-abundant on the continent of Europe. A short apple crop in England, means a demand for American fruit, to the profit, if not of our orchardists, at least to our shippers. In former years, American apples have met with a ready sale at paying prices in England, but within the last two or three years, the trade has been less profitable. It is the old story over again, that good fruit in good condition, brings good prices. Two years ago, taking advantage of the unusual scarcity abroad, parties sent over large quantities of apples, without regard to their quality or condition. As a consequence, this fruit in Convert-garden market, as it would have been in Washington market, was left on the dealer's hands. Hundreds of barrels did not bring the cost of the freight, and American apples fell into disfavor. The same course, if followed this year, will meet with a similar result. Only the best fruit, packed in the best manner, will pay in England as at home.

Remedy Against Barbers.

Barbers will talk. There is no help for that. Their jaws have to keep time with the movement of the scissors. It is not the mere talking that is annoying, but it is what they say, and their manner of saying it, that nearly drives a strong man crazy. If, for instance, a barber were only to make such remarks as—"what a noble brow you have," or "your dome of thought reminds one of Daniel Webster," or if they were to abuse some man you do not like, the sinner would listen very complacently, and some bald-headed people we know of would want to have the ends of their locks trimmed four or five times a week, just to hear what the confounded fool of a barber had to say. The trouble with barbers is that they do not say what you want to listen to. The barber will persist in discovering that your hair is falling out, and there is nothing in heaven above, or on the earth below that will arrest the fugitive hair, except a bottle of each particular barber's magic lotion. Another thing that worries the barber more than it troubles its legitimate owner, is dandruff. As nine persons in ten have more or less dandruff on their heads, the barber has a fine field to work in, as it were. Dandruff is another dread malady that is hurrying the unfortunate man into his grave, unless he is willing to shell out a reluctant half dollar for a bottle of the same vile stuff that the aforesaid barber is willing to part with for the consideration mentioned.

Of course, the eloquence of the barber cannot be closed off entirely, as gas is shut off; but the colored barber can be temporarily discouraged. He will run his hands through your hair and say: "Boss, I kin gib yer a remedy for fifty cents what will knock dat ar scurf in yer head cold."

Then you say: "Look here, you have got one foot in the grave. Your liver is out of order. I can tell it by your complexion. Your complexion is too yellow. You had better get a bottle of Carter's pills or Reed's Gilt Edge Tonic."

He will be surprised if not shocked. We tried that game on a barber, and his reproachful look will never be forgotten while memory holds her seat. Usually one application is sufficient, but occasionally he rallies towards the close of the matinee, his system reacts, and he says timidly: "Yer hasn't answered my question yet, boss, about de bottle of magic lotion for de scurf."

All you have to do is to ask him if he has read Dr. Pillskin's treatise on dandruff. He will reply he has not, then you say:

"Dr. Pillskin is of the opinion that dandruff is produced by activity of the brain. People who have torpid brains or no brains at all, are never troubled with dandruff. What you need is some dandruff. If you colored folks had more dandruff in your heads there would be more of you in Congress. If you don't quit curving white people's head of dandruff, their brains will dwindle away and they will set up barber shops, and then you will have more competition than you will want."

This last dose will cure the barber of dandruff, falling out of the hair, and whatever else troubles him. After the above remedy has been applied, you can get your hair cut ten times a day, and he will never again venture to prescribe for "de scurf in yer head." Try it—Texas Siftings.

Boys and Girls Aid Society.

Sixteen weeks' work of the boys and girls aid society of San Francisco. Since May 1st—sixteen weeks ago—the Society has furnished 884 Lodgings and 2582 meals to friendless boys and girls; has distributed to these children 693 pieces of clothing; has found employment for 57 boys and girls in the city, and placed in good homes or otherwise started on more hopeful careers 92 children, 41 of whom were taken directly from the courts of prisons. It is not only cheaper, but in every way wiser to save children than to punish criminals.

The boys and girls aid society rescues homeless, neglected or abused children; provides for such in its own quarters until suitable homes or employment are found for them, and continues to look after their condition and treatment; maintains reading rooms, libraries, baths, a gymnasium, savings banks, a school of cookery, sewing school, a class in music, and classes for instruction in other branches; also lectures, entertainments, and a temperance organization. Lodgings are furnished at a nominal cost to working boys and girls who have neither homes nor suitable guardianship in the city. The work is free from sectarianism and depends upon voluntary contributions for its support. The society needs money for the prosecution and extension of this important work. Homes and employment for children. We have always on hand children for adoption, and many needing employment, or homes without legal binding. Wearing apparel for children of both sexes and all ages. "Corresponding Members"—ladies and gentlemen in every town and district, to whom we can look for information in regard to applicants for children, and through whom boys and girls placed out in their vicinity, or other children in distress, may appeal to us. We invite correspondence with any lady or gentleman who will help us in this way.

Ready to Pay.

"No, sir," said a Comstock, Nevada, barber, to a suspicious looking transient customer, who affably remarked, as the latter was being laid out, that he supposed there was a good many men who failed to pay their shaving scores.

"No, sir. I used to give credit, but I never do it now—in fact, nobody asks for tick any more."

How's that?

"Well, you see," said the barber, trying the edge of his razor on his thumb nail, I had a set of stiffs who used to ask me to chalk it down. I got tired of keeping books and I adopted a new system. Whenever I shaved one of these old standbys I put a little nick in his nose with my razor and kept tally in that way. They got so they didn't want to run bills."

There was a tremor in the customer's voice as he asked from beneath the latter, "Do you object to being paid in advance?"—Virginia Chronicle.

A colored child had fallen from a second story window the other day, and his mother said:—"Dere dat chile was coming down feet fust, wid eb'ry chance of being killed, when de Lawd he turned him over, de child struck on 'is head, and dere wasn't so much as a button flew off."
