STOCK.

It is stated that Kentucky has, in the last six months, sold over $295,000 worth of thoroughbred trotters.

A pair of milk standing ten minutes where it is exposed to the scent of a strong smelling stable, or any other offensive odor, will imbibe a taint that will never leave it.

LONG LIVED HORSE.—When properly cared for and not abused, horses will live to a remarkable age. A case has been called to our notice of a horse of J. Lee Garrison, of Greene county, Pa., which died last spring at the age of 39 years. His death was produced by accident, and had he not met with the mishap it is probable he would have survived several years longer. It is a noticeable fact that well-bred horses are most given to longevity.

It is said that a German agriculturist, after 25 year's experience, contrary to the general belief that the larger varieties of Merino are to be preferred on account of their yielding a better return both in flesh and wool for the fodder consumed, declares the reverse to be true as the build of the sheep has a greater influence on the fattening properties than the absolute size, and larger quantities of wool are obtained from small sheep in relation to a given weight than in the larger kinds, the relative increase amounting to from 20 to 30 per cent.

Texas Stock Raisers, the Financial Kings of the Future.

The cattle interest of Texas is one of such vast magnitude and importance that it is attracting the attention not only of all the United States but of the entire civilized world. And the eyes of eastern capitalists who are seeking investments for their money are being directed to the Lone Star State.

Texas being in the great grazing belt, her boundless prairies, offer more and better inducements for the investment of money in both cattle and land than any other country known to the human race. She has all the requisites necessary for small as well as large investments of capital combining climate, water and several varieties of grass, with millions of acres of land where the soil is still unbroken. The lands can be had in most any quantity and generally sell at $1 00 to $2 50 per acre. There is also an abundance of cheap labor, especially adapted to the handling of stock. These inducements of which we write are known to every one at all acquainted with the cattle business in the state, and it is unnecessary for us to mention them, but we will say that numerous instances can be cited where men of pluck and energy with moderate means, at the beginning have in a few years, by outside influence, amassed overwhelming fortunes.

Then think what men of ample capital might accomplish with ordinary care and business skill, such as they would give to any other branch of trade. The cattle business of Texas is being conducted as systematically, as honorably and with as much gentility, as any other line of business in the government. All over the broad west the visitor will find among the cattle raisers of Texas as many men of integrity, honor and education as in any other pursuits. Comparing the stock men of Texas with those engaged in different trades, occupations or professions, they rise superior to the ordinary man of business. The stockman's word is his bond; his credit is first class at home and abroad; his account is solicited by the banker; and his trade sought after by the merchants.

Why is this? Simply because the profit in his cattle transaction is a certainty. It seems that nature has arranged affairs in this western part of Texas for the special benefit of the stockman. The cattle grow and multiply night and day. When other industries are asleep, this still marches on, and our only definition of the wonderful profits accruing to all engaged in it is this, that it is a never ceasing, ever increasing eternal compound. Seldom does the annual profits on cattle raising fall short of 30 per cent, and where the range is exceedingly good, combined with skillful, prudent and economical management, and immediate reinvestment of all sales of beef, after deducting expenses, into younger cattle, we have known of more fabulous profits being secured.

In connection therewith we can safely say to all who contemplate the investment of capital in this vast enterprise that there is no danger whatever, either pecuniarily or physically. The men noted for their bluster and bray have gone, and there is no more orderly, quiet set of gentlemen in any portion of God's heritage than the cattlemen of Texas.

The railroad facilities are such that the Texas stockmen can possess all the comforts of homes here as well as in the older states. Many of the ranchmen own elegant homes in some city several hundred miles distant from their herds, where they enjoy all the pleasures of family association without the hardships of camp life. While it is true that we have a great many men engaged in cattle raising in the west, still there is plenty of room for as many more, who will come with means and energy to invest and win the triumphs that have so signally crowned the lives of those heretofore, but how long these opportunities will remain open to the general public is a very grave question and one we shall not undertake to solve—and we can only add as our prophecy, that Texas is destined in the future to be the home of the wealthiest and most influential cattlemen of the world.—Texas Live Stock Journal.

THE HOUSEHOLD.

BAKED INDIAN MEAL PUDDING.—Into 1 quart of boiling milk stir 1 teaspoonful of fine sifted Indian meal, add one quart of cold milk, 3 well beaten eggs, 1 cup of sugar, a small teaspoonful of salt, a piece of butter as large as a small hen egg. Flavor with nutmeg or common spice; turn into a buttered pudding dish and bake two hours. Serve with butter.

BUTTER TO KEEP IN SUMMER.—A simple mode of keeping butter in warm weather, where ice is not handy, is to invert a common flower pot over the butter, with some water in the dish in which the butter is laid. The orifice in the bottom may be corked or not. The porousness of the earthen ware will keep the butter cool. It will be still cooler if the pot be wrapped with a wet cloth. Not the porosity of the earthenware, but the rapid abstraction of heat by external evaporation causes the butter to become hard.

I wish to send to the ladies through the Household a receipt for green tomato catsup, which I think far surpasses the catsup made of ripe tomatoes. Take green tomatoes, white head cabbage, green peppers and onions, (you can judge yourself as to the amount) prepare them and grind them through a "Sausage grinder," having your mill on a table so that the water from your vegetables will run off (as it is liable to spoil your catsup). Then add black pepper, salt and mustard (if you like) put in a jar, pour some good strong vinegar, say a pint, boiling hot, weight down well, and in a few days you will see the fruit of your labor, I hope the ladies will try it as it is excellent.—LILLA D.

PEACHES TO CAN.—Pare and halve your peaches. Pack them as closely as possible in the can without any sugar. When the can is full, pour in sufficient pure cold water to fill all the interstices between the peaches, and reach the brim of the can. Let stand long enough for the water to soak into all the crevices—say six hours—then pour in water to replace what has sunk away. Seal up the can, and all is done. Canned in this way, peaches retain all their freshness and flavor. There will not be enough water in them to render them insipid. If preferred, a cold syrup could be used instead of pure water, but the peaches taste more natural without any sweet.

SPICED BEEF.—Take the bones out of a 6 pound salt flank of beef, and salt the meat into a long thin piece; sprinkle with a piece of each of the following spices mixed together: Mace, nutmeg, ginger, pepper, allspice, and a handful of chopped parsley; roll it up tightly, and place in a cloth closely tied; put into a stew-pan; and 1 small onion, 1 carrot, a piece of celery and a small bunch of sweet herbs. Cover with cold water, let boil and simmer gently five hours; when cooked tie the cloth up tighter and press between two boards; let it get cold. This can be served either plain or glazed.

GOOD COFFEE.—The rule for good coffee is two ounces of coffee to a quart of water—making about five cups. Old government Java is commonly considered the best kind; a mixture of Java and Rio the most serviceable. Rio coffee is the cheapest, strongest and by many preferred to the other kinds. French dripped coffee is never boiled, but boiling water is poured over the coarse ground coffee in a perforated vessel set in the top of the coffee-pot. Double the quantity of coffee is required to make it that way. French dripped coffee has no eggs or other articles added to clear it, neither has Turkish coffee. They are not necessary. If let alone I use no eggs for such a purpose, but the custom to the contrary is prevalent, and it is not worth contending against. Have the coffee fresh roasted and fresh ground, pour cold water to it in a bowl just enough to wet it, put it in the white of an egg and stir up then pour it into hot water in the coffee pot. When it has boiled a minute take it off and either pour the whole contents into the strainer in the urn or else put in half a cup of cold water and let it settle in the pot.

I am aware that by dwelling upon so unenviable a subject as the DEBILITY OF SEXUAL VIGOR the guarantor may appear unwise, but the desire to inform those who are suffering through ignorance, or who by carelessness or want of knowledge, that a cure can be had, are not only burying themselves to an untimely grave, but giving sexual weakness as an inheritance to future generations, is too great an incentive to permit me to be silent.
