To advertise profitably in proportion to the money expended, requires study and thought. By all parties who have made the question of advertising a study it is unanimously conceded that the newspaper is the best because it is constantly being circulated among the people every week, if a weekly, and each day if a daily. Besides of all other means newspaper you." advertising is conceded to be the cheapest by far.

THE GAZETTE.

The time of year for reading is approaching and people will soon be selecting their newspapers for the coming year. In a little over a month the GAZETTE will start on the 20th year of its existance, and when that year rolls around the Corvallis GAZETTE will than be twenty years old. We feel confident in saying that during all of that time it never has prospered better than during the last year. Ever since we commenced laboring with it it has steadily been increasing in subscriptions and advertising patronage. The material for making a variety of news is not to be found so much in a small place like this, as it is in larger places, yet we have endeavored at all times to give all news of interest to the reader. If each friend of the GAZETTE will take it in hand and obtain one new subscriber, for it, payable-in advance, for the coming year it will about double our subscription list which will aford revenue sufficient for us to make valuble improvements to the paper which all will highly appreciate.

Let every reader of the GAZETTE lend their influence in this direction. The better a newspaper is patronized the more valuable it becomes to all its is now said the way out of the difficulty has readers, for the proprietors, when the been found, which is for old Judge Bradley paperis flourishing financially, are al- of the supreme court to retire for Folger to ways ready and willing to expend take his place and New to be secretary. he means for the improvement of its solumns,

TELEGRRMS.

Washington, Nov. 12 .- The rumor that Assistant Secretary New had resigned started here again yesterday, but is premature At least it grows out of a well-known fact that New does not like his position, and wants the secretaryship of nothing. By common consent, Folger or New must go. Very nearly a year ago now New became assistant secretary, succeeding Upton. Upton had been political manager of the department, both under Sherman and under Windom. When New succeeded him, Secretary Folger having just been inducted into office, he naturally supposed he was succeeding, not only to Upton's throne, but to Upton's sceptre. In fact his friends assert with great positiveness that, knowing Folger to be comparatively untrained in the arts of political politics, the president appointed New to run the treasury for him, so far as its politics went. But the secretary proved refractory. He insisted on knowing all about everything done in his name, and was too tender hearted to allow men and women to be discharged merely because omeone else wanted their places. With control over appointments had nothing in particular to do. He signs his name to documents just like the chief of the Bureau, but has no real discretion or power. His position does not amount to much more than that of a hand stamp. How unsatisfactory this is to a man of New's ideas, temperament and ambitions can be imagined. Mention is being made of the trouble caused by New's promises of offices which Folger refused to give. Folger did proach to New York. Most of the people not like it because New made the promise and New did not like it because Folger did not allow the promises to be kept. It pox and lost upwards of 60,000 lives.
