Adelphian Entertainment. At Hamilton's Hall last Saturday evening

while the eager crowd were anxiously waiting to witness the entertainment of the Adelphian Literary Society. So full was the crowded house that some could only find standing room. A selection from "Lady of the Lake" opened the performance Frank Irvine carried the part of Rhoderick Dhu while David Osburn did well the part of James Fitz James. Both of them performed their parts very well. Next came a Drama in three acts entitled "Enlisted for the War." David Osburn performed in work will be rapidly pushed to completion a very creditable manner the part of Robert Trueworth, a Union Soldier and only son of a widowed mother, who had enlisted during the war and who had fallen deeply in love with Gaylie Gifford (an heiress) who had lived from early childhood with his nother's family, having been placed in care of Mrs. Trueworth by Gaylie's father who had went to distant lands te seek his tortune but in latter years had died leaving Wilder Rowell guardian of the person and fortune of his daughter, and who was also madly in love with the heiress for the sake of her fortune, whose character in the drama was to act that of an unprincipled villian. Shortly before Roberts enlistment his father had died leaving their old home under It has been rumored during the week that mortgage to Hosea Jenks a country auca hot spring has recently been discovered tioneer and jack of all trades who after able to learn anything more certain about to Wilder Rowell. Mrs. Trueworth matron of Trueworth farm and mother of Rob. was performed in a very easy and graceful manner well suited to the occasion by Miss Christina Willard. The character of Miss Mattie Trueworth, sister to Bob, was very well done by Miss Janie Buchanan, whose devoted lover was Hiram Jenks a young man of twenty and son to the auctionee who dubed his son "a mere boy." Mattie at first disfavored the boys' entreaties, but when Trueworth farm was sold out from under them and left them homeless, Hiram came to the rescue and found and purchased home for them, she then began to open E. Grimm, Prof. Ag., & Chem., " her eyes to the fact that the young man had a heart beyond that of a "mere boy," whereipon she soon reciprocated his entreaties After learning that Robert had enlisted in the union army and that Bob's love was warmly reciprocated by Gaylie Gifford, Wilder Rowell in order to crush Bob secured the position of Colonel of Bob's regiment who was a most tyranical officer over Bob his inferior in ranks. Much blasting has to be leaving Ainsworth there is nothing to dedone owing to the rock that they meet light the eye of the traveler until Palouse Junction is reached. Then there is some finish the last named cut. A large amount signs of a change in the country; the sage of cribing is being put up across a large brush grows smaller, there is less sand and more grass. After Rock lake is reached The work is progressing finely on all three the land improves in quality. The R. R. runs along the north side of the lake 6 miles. Two miles above is the thriving little town upon which the company run all timber of Sprague on the N. P. R. R. Four miles north there is fine rolling prairie black sandy loam and as good bunch grass as can be found in Washington Territory. All the good land is taken up for 15 to 20 miles from here. Eight miles to timber from Sprague. Eight miles northwest of town is the head of the much talked of Crab Creek; good soil, good grass and fine stock country around here. As you go down the creek it becomes rocky on either side for two miles; but a few miles each way will bring the land hunter to good land, but all the time he will be going away from timber. There is no timber to amount to anything only on the mountains east of here. The country south of Sprague is a better watered country than to the north; all this country outh to Coltax is a rich soil and good stock ange-The only drawback is the lack of imber. The land is pretty well piled up, but that does not matter so much as the granger gets more land on a quarter section. Plenty of wind power here. It appears to be a good country for colts, calves and
